An Annoying Atheist
Mr. Rosenwald's Gifts
N. Y. to L. A. in 47 Hours
Pictures and Voice

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1928, by Star Co.

THE REV. DR. STRATON complained of C. L. Smith, and he, who calls himself an atheist, convicted of annoying a clergyman, will be sentenced to fine or imprisonment. He might, but probably won't, be sentenced to three years in jail.

A few years ago he would have been burned alive, not for annoying a clergyman, but for insulting God.

We treat atheists more mildly now, perhaps on the theory that if God wanted them burned He would do it himself.

The success of the individual is often the good fortune of the many.

Julius Rosenwald, who began with a public school education, courage and the desire to help others, has established a fund "for the benefit of humanity," recently adding $2,000,000 to other gifts, now in excess of $20,000,000.

Mr. Rosenwald gives the money to trustees for the public benefit, and imposes only one condition, that "all the money shall be spent, principal and interest, within twenty-five years of Mr. Rosenwald's death."

May that death be long postponed.

General Atterbury of the Pennsylvania Railroad, co-operating with President Storey of the Santa Fe, will make flying a part of regular travel across the continent.

The plan, using airplanes by day and Pullman cars at night, mentioned in this column a couple of weeks ago, has been fully elaborated.

The Atlantic to Pacific traveler will take a fast Pennsylvania train in New York at 6 p. m., and next morning at Columbus, O., change to an airplane, flying 100 miles an hour all day, with Fred Harvey feeding him.

At Wichita, Kan., he will board a Santa Fe sleeping car. Next morning in New Mexico another airplane will take him to Los Angeles, arriving at 5 that afternoon.

Two nights in a sleeper, two days in a flying machine. Next will come the ten-hour hop from the Atlantic to the Pacific with no change.

Moving picture enthusiasts will soon have sound with their pictures. Actors will talk and sing on the screen and news reels will enable crowds to see and HEAR what happens.

Moving picture actors will need good voices as well as beautiful teeth, faces, legs and hair.

Soon the actor without a good voice will be a moving picture actor no longer.

William Fox and his "Movietone," aided by Walter S. Gifford of the big telephone company, and Mr. Bloom of the Western Electric, have convinced the moving picture industry that moving pictures in future will require "sound and fury."

Various changes will come, actors with good voices will be imported to Hollywood or moving picture studios will be transferred to places where good voices can be found.

New York State has signed a check for $33,723,734, the biggest ever drawn by the richest State. The best part of it is that the money will be spent for public schools.

Not long ago every state spent more for prisons than for public schools, and nothing at all for public libraries. There is progress.

WINS SEPARATE SUPPORT SUIT

Mrs. Maude A. Doane of Brookline, who was awarded separate support from George B. Doane, prominent Brookline yachtsman, today by Judge Joseph R. McCoole in Norfolk Probate Court. She is awarded $200 a month and Doane is restrained from interfering with her liberty.

Separate support of $200 a month was awarded by Judge Joseph R. McCoole in Norfolk Probate Court today to Mrs. Maude A. Doane of Brookline in her suit against George B. Doane, prominent Brookline yachtsman.

The finding, rendered after Judge McCoole had the case under consideration for several weeks, prohibits and restrains Doane from interfering with the personal liberty of his wife.

Doane is ordered to pay Mrs. Doane $200 on May 26 and $200 thereafter on the 26th of each month until further order of the court.

This and a preceding divorce case brught by Mrs. Doane have been in the courts at intervals since January, 1925. She lost the divorce suit.

Counter charges against his wife were made by Doane.

EVIDENCE LACKING, HE SAYS

In a bitter finish during which the terms "graft," "crook!" and "purchase of official favor" were flung back and forth between Atty.-Gen. Reading and Herbert Parker all the evidence at the hearing of the attorney-general's conduct in office was concluded before the legislative committee today.

The hearing adjourned until tomorrow, when the defence will be summed up by Robert Dodge of Reading's counsel and the hearing officially closed. The committee is expected to report its recommendations to the Legislature within two weeks.

Parker closed his relentless cross-examination of Reading with the question:

"In the absence of explanations, haven't the facts recited established prima facie evidence of your official favor having been purchased?"

"I should say they don't," Reading replied.

"What fact is lacking from my hypothesis from which the inference

Sees Safety Lesson in 'Dead Pal Plea'

By: Frank A Goodwin

Highway Safety Editor of the Evening American and former Registrar of Motor Vehicles for Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

"Automobiles killed 15 persons last week in Massachusetts!"

Tens of thousands of motorists glanced at this news item on Monday morning and then passed on to something more important, such as baseball scores, murders or divorces.

Four of those killed were little children. Not many were personally interested in the mention of these tragedies. Many were not interested then who will be next week and the week after, and so on.

How can we interest those who feel no personal interest now? Perhaps we may be able to by a recital of such a tragedy, in a manner out of the ordinary.

In Philadelphia, a year ago, a little girl was killed and a father with imagination and a broken heart, told the world of his sorrow in the following beautiful but pathetic words:

"A wave of the hand, a kiss on the breeze—from the sweetest little pal in the world.

MULLEN AND BONDSMAN IN SIX INDICTMENTS BY JURY IN GRAFT PROBE

Six indictments were returned today by the Grand Jury investigating the alleged "shakedown" of a South End hotel proprietor and other alleged graft and extortion in the city of Boston.

The indictments were secret but three of those indicted were speedily revealed as the following:

John F. Mullen, former State st. broker and called the "boy broker" and the "phantom salesman," who only last night was caught after defaulting in a larceny case involving $12,000.

Ralph E. Gross of Branch st., Lowell, [illegible]

Albert J. Sidlinger of Temple st., West End, a bondsman.

Mullen, already in custody, was quickly arraigned and pleaded not guilty to four counts against him in the extortion case.

He collapsed in the pen in Superior Court just before he was arraigned and looked as if on the verge of collapse again as he faced Judge Frederick Fosdick.

Mullen is charged with conspiracy to steal from John Sullivan, proprietor of the Ritz hotel, Columbus ave., South End.

Conspiracy to obstruct justice is another count against him; obstructing justice is a third charge, and a fourth is conspiracy to solicit a po

200 SEE MENJOU WED FILM BEAUTY IN PARIS

Paris, May 16 (AP)—With 200 persons watching, Adolphe Menjou and Kathryn Carver, American screen stars, were married at the City Hall of the Sixteenth Ward today.

The bride was dressed in a beige tailor made suit, a close-fitting beige untrimmed hat with a rather wide brim. Her shoes were also beige and her pale blue stockings matched a waist of the same color. She had a large bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley—France's lucky flower.

Menjou had on a morning coat with light gray feathered trousers and wore a [illegible] in his buttonhole.

Col. Marcel Brosse, assistant mayor of the 16th ward, officiated. He congratulated the bridegroom on his war record, reviewing his career from private to captain in campaigns in France and Italy.

RADIO LINKS NOBILE TO WORLD ON POLAR FLIGHT

Kings Bay, Spitzbergen, May 16 (AP)—A steady stream of radio signals today linked Kings Bay with the dirigible Italia now cruising in lonely majesty over the mysterious Polar regions long so inhospitable to man.

The Italia was sending hourly wireless messages to her base ship, the Citta Di Milano, at Kings Bay, telling of observations made by the dirigible.

Gen. Umberto Nobile sent a message early this morning that the Italia had experienced an hour and a half fog and had to fly at a height of 150 meters in a 50-kilometer wind

A. T. & T. OFFERS STOCK ISSUE OF $185,000,000

Stockholders of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., by vote of the directors, were offered today $185,000,000 in new stock at $100 a share.

Each stockholder of record at the close of business June 1 will be entitled to subscribe in proportion of one share for each six then held.

The issue is to provide funds for new construction needed by the Bell System to care for additional business resulting from the constantly greater use of telephone service.

Notices to stockholders were being mailed today and the subscription warrants, in both full-share and fractional form, will be mailed June 11.

New stock payments will be spread over eight months.

30 LOTS OF SEIZED RUM VANISH AT STATE HOUSE

The amazing charge that 30 different lots of confiscated liquor were taken from the State House in one day was today reported to be under investigation by the board of inquiry appointed by Governor Fuller.

A statement to this effect is said to have been made by a State House employe when examined by the board which is probing charges that confiscated liquor has been consumed by legislators and State officials.

According to a rumor prevalent in the Capitol, the witness told the inquiry board that 30 times in one day persons carried seized liquor through the Derne st. entrance of

MURDERED MAN'S BODY FOUND ON GOLF LINKS

With a bullet hole puncturing the abdomen, the body of Giacomo Ferraro, 35, of Kilby st., Hingham, was found in Whitney's woods edging the Cohasset golf links, at a point 75 feet off a woods path and half a dozen miles from the main road through Whitney's crossing.

A man sought by State, Cohasset and Hingham police is said to have had trouble with Ferraro some time ago.

Thomas Ayers, caretaker of the Whitney estate in North Cohasset, found the body. It was lying on the back with hands straight at the sides, as if carefully arranged.

It is believed Ferraro was killed in ambush at some place and the body was carried into the woods.

Ferraro lived with a married sister, but because it was his habit to be absent from home, without explanation, for months at a time, his disappearance never was reported to police.

ATTY. HATTON AND GROSS HELD IN GRAFT CASE

MRS. HURD ONLY U. S. HOPE IN BRITISH GOLF

Hunstanton, Eng., May 16 (AP)—Great Britain, the United States and France are represented in the surviving eight women golfers seeking the British championship.

The quarter-finals tomorrow morning will find Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd of Philadelphia left alone to represent the United States and Mlle. Manette Le Bran as the sole representative of France. Six British players are left, Misses Joy Winn, Edith Corlett, Enid Wilson, S. Marshall, Judith Fowler and Mabel Wragg.

Miss Glenna Collett was eliminated in the fourth round by Miss Mabel Wragg, who defeated Mrs. A. J. Oxley in the afternoon, 5 and 4.

Mrs. Hurd won two matches today, defeating Miss Aline Dobson,

GRAND JURY RETURNS 6 INDICTMENTS IN "GRAFT RING" INQUIRY

PROBE ENDS AS POLICE TESTIFY

fice officer to aid in commission of a crime.

Gross is charged with conspiracy to solicit a policeman to aid in a crime. This is the charge against Sidlinger also.

These two men surrendered to Dist.-Atty William J. Foley and Asst.-Dist.-Atty. Frederick T. Doyle for arraignment as soon as they learned of the indictments. There was a delay in the formal arraignment of them.

Meanwhile Mullen was held in bail of $500 on each of the court counts lodged against him in the Grand Jury indictment.

The "boy broker" was also arraigned on 13 counts of larceny in connection with sales of stock and was held in bail of $12,000 on these charges. He was to have been arraigned on these counts last week, when he failed to appear in court and avoid discovery until last night when found at the home of a friend in Walpole.

He is the "State street broker" prominently mentioned in the graft investigation which, according to the authorities, John Sullivan, the hotel owner, refused to pay any longer for supposed "protection."

Following testimony by two policemen at the opening of today's session, Asst. Dist. Atty. Doyle, who is handling the investigation, plunged into a new and mysterious angle of the graft probe, an angle that touches Chinatown and involves, according to reports, two girls, a prominent attorney and a lawyer's "runner."

Stenographic notes that have come into the hands of the assistant district attorney play an important part in the new phase of the probe. During a recess in the grand jury session Doyle called in a lawyer's girl secretary to transcribe these notes.

The Chinatown angle is said to relate, chiefly, to protection provided for two girls who were secretly in the employ of the attorney in question. All names are being withheld by the authorities.

It was learned that Doyle and Special Officer Martin Conroy, who is assigned to the district attorney's staff, made a trip during the night to a nearby city to interview two witnesses in this connection.

The two policemen who testified today before the Grand Jury were Special Officer Oliver Garrett of the headquarters liquor squad and Special Officer Arthur Tiernan. There was a third witness but Asst. Dist. Atty. Doyle refused to give his name.

MOTHER OF 6 JAILED FOR SLAYING HER HUSBAND

Mrs. Elizabeth Jackson, 37, of Hampshire st., Roxbury, mother of six children, was sentenced to Sherborn Reformatory for Women today by Judge Fosdick in Suffolk Superior Court, following a plea of guilty to manslaughter. She was charged with having killed her husband, Guy V. Jackson, with a hatchet last January while the husband, intoxicated, was abusing her.

the State House and placing it in automobiles, drove away.

HULL'S STATEMENT.

While the board resumed its sitting behind closed doors, interviewing four members of the engine room staff and the elevator operators, Speaker of the House John C. Hull said he could not state at present what action would be taken on the order of Representative Roland D. Sawyer of Ware.

This order asks that the House ways and means committee begin a rigorous probe into all the charges "to save the honor of the House."

"I know of no action contemplated," said Speaker Hull. He said he had five days to present the order, which at present is not officially before the lower branch. The order, when presented, will go to the rules committee, which will then decide whether to send it to the House.

Representative Sawyer said today he would appear before the rules committee and urge it to admit the order so the House can adopt it and the speaker, before prorogation, appoint a committee to investigate.

It was considered possible the Rules Committee would hold up the order until the report of the board of inquiry is turned in to Governor Fuller.

MANY MORE WITNESSES.

In this connection Chairman Charles P. Howard of the Commission on Administration and Finance, heading the board, said it did not appear likely that the investigation would be completed this week as was thought. He said he knew of 10 witnesses yet to be heard and they may suggest the names of numerous others.

With Commissioner Howard on the board are Commissioners McCormick and Cronin of the Department of Administration and Finance; Commissioner of Public Safety Foote, and Superintendent of Buildings Kimball.

The inquiry and the charges that led up to it, made by Freeman Dickinson of Everett, a State boiler inspector, continue to be the center of State House interest.

Officers Perkins and Stanton, the regular Spring st. patrol on the Charles river, were notified and began grappling in the river for the body.

GAS TAX MAY GO TO VOTERS

A move for a referendum on the gasoline tax law and place the question of its repeal on the ballot at the next State election, was made today when preliminary papers were filed at the office of the Secretary of State.

The petition is signed by Charles H. McGlue, Thomas J. Giblin, Dav Baker, Albert R. Thayer, Thomas F. Baldwin, Edwin S. Gillespie, Nathan Jacobson, Edmund W. Giblin, Fred O'Conner and Earle G. Weston, all of Boston.

The bill, which calls for a tax of 2 cents a gallon on gas and fixing automobile registration fees at 30 per cent of the present standards, was signed last Friday by Governor Fuller and is scheduled to go into effect January 1 next. The petitioners have 90 days in which to file 15,000 additional signatures.

It's Here at Last! a Non-Stop Flight From Saugus

Christian Wilson, Saugus garage owner and inventor, 44 years old and the father of 8 children, announced today he would start a non-stop flight to Copenhagen, Denmark, from the Saugus aviation field next August.

The fact that Wilson has never done any flying he dismissed casually, stating he was going to take lessons at the Boston airport and obtain a pilot's license in plenty of time to make the trip.

Wilson said he had succeeded in getting the backing of a millionaire, and it is understood he intends to try out some invention on which he has been working. He was born in Denmark.

cinema artist after Charlie Chaplin." Menjou never batted an eye at this compliment.

Miss Carver also received her share of congratulations from the French official, who referred to her "exquisite beauty and wonderful talent."

Menjou squared his shoulders and responded with a single "Oui" when Col. Brosse asked the decisive question.

Addressed as Kathryn Drum by the assistant mayor, the bride simply made an affirmative sign with her head, her "Oui" being inaudible 10 feet away.

Then the witnesses, Philippe Ortea and Charles V. Campbell, Jr., for the groom, and Elizabeth Drum, sister of the bride, and William J. O'Brien, American consul, for Miss Carver, and the couple signed the register.

Col. Brosse recalled that he had performed the wedding ceremonies of Gloria Swanson and Max Linder. "Our City Hall is becoming popular with cinema stars," he said.

An envelope containing a gift from the couple for the poor of Paris was slipped into the City Hall official's palm unobtrusively. None saw the gesture, but the heartiest thanks of Brosse, who said:

"Menjou is not only a great artist but a generous one," testified that the sum must have been large.

One of the ushers, who attended the marriage of Ganna Walska and Harold F. McCormick in the same little room where other wealthy Americans have been married, simply beamed, and holding his hand tightly over his pocket said, "I wish we had one like this every day."

The Menjous left for London at noon.

Nobile Tells of Daring Death in Polar Zone

By GEN. UMBERTO NOBILE

Commander-in-Chief of the Dirigible Italia

(Copyright, 1928, in the United States, Canada, Great Britain, Germany, South America and Cuba by the New York American, Inc. World rights reserved.)

Aboard the Italia, En Route to the North Pole, 5:25 P. M., May 15—It has been a smooth and uneventful journey so far.

We are heading toward Frans Joseph Archipelago, retracing our steps of Friday, last. The airship just passed the North Cape of Spitzbergen and is now launched on the immense polar wilderness.

About 4 p. m. we found ourselves suddenly in the depths of a thick fog bank. I decided to descend to a lower level beneath the fog. Visibility is very variable, but all things considered, I cannot complain. It might be worse.

A fairly strong headwind is causing the Italia to pitch slightly. Again I must repeat what I wrote after leaving Kings Bay last week—we intend and hope to succeed this time but everything depends on the meteorological conditions, especially the visibility. You cannot fly toward the pole blindfolded.

It is glorious to speed along high in the wonderful azure of the northernmost sky after the alarms of the last two days when the Italia was nearly crushed in one of the worst snowstorms I can remember. It should be an axiom that an airship always is safer in the air than on land. Our experiences at King's Bay proved this once more.

It was 1 p. m. when the Italia was guided to the middle of the snowfield outside the hangar. Every at a speed of from 30 to 40 kilometers.

The Venezia flag early today was dropped over Tipliz Bay in honor of Francho Querieni who followed the Cegni polar expedition of 1909 and perished there.

At 8 a. m. two-thirds of the flight had been made and the airship was then northeast of Frans Josef's Sea. All aboard were well.

The dirigible was then proceeding to the east coast of Lenin land where an ice anchor will be dropped and three men put ashore on this little known land.

The Italia is expected to return to Kings Bay before Friday. Her third trip will probably be to the so called Crocker land, northeast of Greenland.

DAME BOSTON IS DOLLING UP FOR FLIERS

Dame Boston began prinking today in preparation for the arrival of her illustrious visitors, the crew of the transcontinental airplane Bremen.

With Capt. Koehl, Maj. Fitzmaurice and Baron von Huenefeld due to reach here by air Friday, public and private buildings began to blaze forth in colors.

Bunting and flags of the Irish Free State and German republic were displayed, together with the American colors, on a number of buildings, including City Hall, park department headquarters and Boston Arena, where the municipal reception is to take place.

At the same time General Manager Dana of the Elevated announced that on account of the parade the following changes will be made in car and bus service immediately preceding and during the procession on Saturday afternoon:

The Fenway-Bowdoin sq. bus line will be discontinued. The Brookline and Jamaica Plain-Huntington ave. service will be operated to and from the subway via Massachusetts ave. and Tremont st. The Dudley st.-Park sq. line will be discontinued. The Boston & Worcester car service will be turned back at Massachusetts and Huntington aves.

Unless obstructed by traffic, the North Station Parl sq., via Charles st., line, will be operated to a point as near Park sq. as possible. All other lines will be operated as usual. Patrons wishing to reach the Back Bay are requested to take the Boylston st. subway.

WHITNEYS MAY BE REUNITED, SAYS MOTHER

By FRANCES L. BAIRD.

Ultimate reconciliation of the Whitneys for the sake of their children was predicted today by Mrs. Alice Clarke Read, mother of Mrs. Frances Clark Whitney, who has temporary custody of her young son and daughter pending final decision of the New Hampshire courts.

Mrs. Read, with her daughter and grandchildren, was at Lincolnshire Hotel today preparing to move into Mrs. Whitney's house. At the hotel, for the first time since last November, their mother dressed Pamela Ann, 5, and Russell, 3.

The prediction that Harold Osgood Whitney and his wife would become reconciled was made by Mrs. Whitney's mother without reservation as to the final decree of the Laconia court on their cross suits for divorce and custody.

"I should not be surprised if they some day live together again for the children's sake," said Mrs. Read. "Deep down in her heart Frances loves Harold and she always will because she can't help it. That is her nature, loyal to the end."

Joy tinged with sorrow colored today's dawn for Mrs. Whitney.

"Oh, the relief of tucking them in bed myself and knowing just how they are each day," she sighed happily.

"I hate to take them from their father, but I feel that everything will yet come out all right," Mrs. Whitney said.

Many messages and calls of congratulation came to Mrs. Whitney throughout the day from friends. She was deeply touched.

"It is so kind of people to have understood and come forward at a time like this," she said—"so good to know who are one's friends in time of trouble."

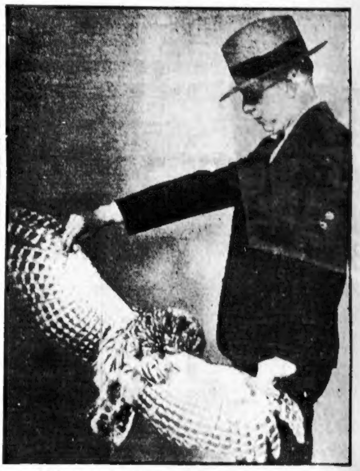
WISDOM IS DEAD IN HUB!



FOLLY OF WISE OLD BIRD IS FATAL

This old owl wasn't so wise or he wouldn't have been jay-flying in Washington st. at 2 a. m. The owl came to grief early today in front of the R. H. White Co. store when he (she or it) crashed into the windshield of an automobile.

Roxbury Man Dies From Gas

Henry Dwight, 60, lodger in a house in Renfrew st., Roxbury, was found unconscious today sitting in a chair in his room. Gas was flowing from a wall jet. He died at the City Hospital.

BEAUTY NEEDED TO OFFSET EVIL, SAYS COOLIDGE

Washington, May 16 (INS)—President Coolidge, addressing a joint meeting of the American Federation of Arts and the American Association of Museums here today drew an analogy from the homily about clothes making the man and urged a greater application of the arts to the expansion and growth of American cities.

“As clothes make the man—and certainly good dress gives one a sense of self-respect and poise—how much more is it true that clean, beautiful surroundings lend a moral tone to a community,” he said.

“Gradually we are getting rid of the squalor of the slums of our big cities and of the oppressive ugliness of the small towns.”

“It is the practical side of art that requires more emphasis. We need to put more effort into translating art into the daily life of the people. If we could surround ourselves with the forms of beauty, the evil things of life would tend to disappear and our moral standards would be raised.

“Through our contact with the beautiful we see more of the truth and are brought into closer harmony with the infinite.”

The President lauded the recent practice of inaugurating zoning laws in the larger communities.

BOSTON INSTITUTIONS SHARE $300,000 ESTATE

Boston institutions and individuals in this vicinity are beneficiaries under the will of Miss Mary Woodman of Portland, Me., allowed today in Probate Court. Miss Woodman died April 7, aged 85. The estate is valued at $300,000, of which $272,000 goes in cash bequests to 23 institutions.

Individual beneficiaries include Mary I. McCarthy of Somerville, “a faithful friend,” $5000; Lewis Usher of Rockport and Susannah Usher of Boston, cousins, $25,000 each; Ellen B. Usher of Rockport, third cousin, $15,000; Elizabeth I. Wright of Cambridge, niece, $5000.

The Boston Children’s Friend Society, Florence Crittenden League of Compassion, Mass. Association for the Blind, New England Home for Deaf Mutes, Community Health Association, Franklin Square House, Museum of Fine Arts, Unitarian Service Pension Fund, and East End Union receive $1000 each.

MRS. LARZ ANDERSON EVER DELIGHTS IN GREETING FORMER WORLD WAR ASSOCIATES, SAYS BETTY ALDEN

Chestnut Hill Horse Show to Be Run Off on Grounds of Longwood Cricket Club, May 30

MRS. LARZ ANDERSON, SOCIAL LEADER AND PENWOMAN, war veteran, mistress of beautiful Weld and quietly, even secretly, philanthropical, presents to an admiring world many brilliant facets. Of the many interesting concerns in a career rarely diversified, close friends of Mrs. Anderson claim two are dearest to her heart—one her authorship and the other the remarkable war service it was her privilege to render the Allies. In war torn Belgium, close to the front line, Mrs. Anderson did yeoman service in a hospital that never was far from the trenches.

SO NATURALLY WHEN HUNDREDS OF HER FELLOW WAR workers come to town Mrs. Anderson delights to do them honor. Weld, with its beautiful gardens and glades and flowering glories, will be in its freshest and most verdant springtime dress. And so there is to be a garden party and tea at Weld, with Mrs. Anderson as hostess and her guests the young women who saw war service abroad during the recent world upheaval and who soon flock to Boston in great numbers. Some of Mrs. Anderson’s front line experiences have been fruit for her pen—notably, “The Wall Paper Code,” that tells of life as lived almost under the enemy guns.

FRIVOLITIES, INTERSPERSED WITH THE MORE SERIOUS duties of delegates and members when in “convention assembled,” will be the program for the overseas women. Miss Hope Gray of Mount Vernon pl., one of the important young women who has been leader of Boston’s Overseas Unit, plans to do something pleasant for intimates who served with her in France in occupational therapy work. Miss Gray has been south for a part of the winter, I believe, but will be in town in good season to take a leading part when the big gathering gets here.

ABLE ASSISTANT AT CHARITY AFFAIR

Yesterday’s farm and garden sale went on merrily, at Mrs. Frederic C. Hood’s in Brookline, with Miss Mary Johnson as one of the pretty sales force.

MRS. ELIOT WADSWORTH’S dinners and supper parties are always the recherche sort so cosmopolitan a matron as she would give. And when she entertains prominent stage people, as she did recently, the affair takes on an even brighter tinge. Mrs. Wadsworth entertained a group for dinner, the sprites who dance so entertainingly on the Colonial stage under the name of the Rasch girls. As a sponsor for the new Charlotte Cushman Club, Mrs. Wadsworth’s interest in stage people is more than cursory.

ALL THE HORSE SHOWS THIS year are the “biggest” and “best” so their promoters affirm. Directors for the Chestnut Hill Show on May 30 let it be known that so many entries have already been received the show will, even if no more come in, outdistance last year’s. Greensward on the Longwood Cricket Club grounds is invitingly smooth and the show as it goes on there is a pretty spectacle. Perhaps the morning’s classes are most absorbing. They are at least to the parents of the small children who so gallantly ride their mounts.

PRESCOTT BIGELOW’S SMALL daughter, Mary Anne, rides as a child of his would. And always the Bigelow motor filled with the Still Very Young Set is at the ringside. Likewise a Mumford motor, a Webster motor; the West, the Saltonstall, the Forbes, the Bancroft, the Rust and the Fessenden cars are in choice positions among the hundred or more that almost completely encircle the tanbark.

Miss Betty Tailer to Be Bride of W. G. Dyer

NOT ONLY IS MRS. HAROLD READ of Cambridge an ardent worker for the Junior S. P. C. C., but she has two attractive daughters, respectively debutante and sub-debutante, to enlist in the cause. Now she and her Cambridge coterie are hard at work making plans for their morning of movies, May 26, at the University Theater in the University City. I believe the wherewithal to clothe young wards of the Junior Division must be found, hence the movie that funds may be forthcoming.

BLONDE AND PETITE MISS BETTY TAILER, adored daughter of the T. Suffern Tailers of Newport and Gotham, will make the prettiest of golden-haired brides as well as one of the youngest to tread the orange blossom path. For Miss Tailer stands before the altar with young Mr. W. Gurnee Dyer even before she reaches the birthday that is designated “bewitching eighteen.” Coming out when she was seventeen and becoming a bride when she is scarce eighteen, she sets a record for youthfulness in her ultra smart set.

BREMEN PLANES ARE OFF FOR NORTH AGAIN

Pictou, N. S., May 16 (AP)—The two Amphibian planes commanded by Maj.-Gen. Fechet, chief of the United States army air service, took off at 10:15 o’clock, eastern daylight time, this morning, for St. George’s, N. F.

The planes are on their way to the coast of Labrador to aid the German monoplane Bremen to continue its flight to New York.

CROSSES SEA TO GET PAINTING OF DEAD SUITOR

A romance born of the arts and broken by death after years of a sweetheart’s love and mother’s devotion, was revealed today with the sailing of the Italian steamship Presidente Wilson from Commonwealth Pier.

With a heavy and bulky portrait—copy of the Mona Lisa—that she allowed no one to trundle for her, Miss Edith Magouri of New York unrevealed the story of years of struggle by her artist sweetheart, dead less than a year, and the call of his mother for “his masterpiece.”

The copy was made by Leonardo Nardi, native of a small Italian town, before he came to America to further his art. Success was not his, Miss Magouri said, and he paid the price of disillusionment when discouragement and broken health brought death.

Then came word from Italy that Mrs. Nardi was failing. She asked her son’s sweetheart, whom she had never seen, to carry the one painting she had seen to her bedside.

Today she left port in a dingy inside stateroom in third class quarters, the painting wrapped crudely and cared for carefully by her alone.

“His mother and I thought him a success,” she said with a shrug. “I guess the world did not.

FAMILY SAILS ALONE AS POLICE GRAB FUGITIVE

Somewhere on the high seas today, the wife and six children of Vasileon Frudetis will learn that he is not aboard the liner Presidente Wilson with them, bound for Greece. Just before the liner sailed from Boston today Boston police searching for him found Frudetis under a berth. He is wanted in Wyoming for alleged larceny of $5000 and was sailing first class under the name of Anthony Xemakis. His family did not know he was arrested and taken ashore.

New Way to Buy Water Heaters

The Boston Consolidated Gas Company has undertaken to make this a community of hot water users. “A modern hot water system for every home” is the slogan adopted to express the purpose of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company.

The company has worked out a plan whereby during May anyone can have a water heater installed without any payment down and with the purchase price spread out over a year.

“This means,” said a company official, “that nothing stands between any household and the ownership and enjoyment of a modern hot water supply, with plenty of hot water for everybody and every purpose.”—Advt.

READING ADMITS L. A. W. CHECK TRANSACTION WAS 'NOVEL'

could be drawn that your official favor had been purchased?"

"The evidence," said Reading.

"What evidence?"

"The evidence of graft and crookedness."

The testimony of Dist. Atty. Charles B. Rugg of Worcester was challenged and termed "incorrect" by Reading before the hearing closed.

The attorney-general denied he had told Dist. Atty. Rugg on the telephone that "a big larceny from a company in Worcester" had been called to his attention. The phrase was quoted by Rugg testifying as the first witness at the hearing.

The denial followed soon after Reading's testimony that he had satisfied himself there was no criminal issue involved in the alleged overcharges by the United L. A. W. of Worcester, and precipitated one of many heated passages between the witness and his unrelenting interrogator, former Atty. Gen. Herbert Parker.

"Do you believe the district attorney has stated other than it was?" Parker thundered

"I do," Reading shouted back.

The attorney general said Rugg appeared before the committee without preparation "I say he has made an incorrect report. I say he is mistaken in his recollection of the statement I made to him, and I do not challenge his motives."

The capacity in which Reading acted when he called Louis A. Wolfe, United head, into conference, was the subject of a searching inquiry by Parker. Reading said he was acting neither as attorney general nor as counsel for the Boston subsidiary, but as a director of the Boston company.

He did not warn Wolfe that anything he said might be used against him, he admitted, but took issue with Parker on the law requiring such warning.

ADMITS ENDORSING CHECK.

Parker's first questions dealt with the early stage of Reading's affiliation with the Boston subsidiary of the United L. A. W. The attorney general testified that the check for $2700 sent him on Aug. 15 by the parent company was in his posession just long enough to be endorsed and turned back to "make the stock transaction more clear," as Hatfield had put it.

Q.—You accepted the check under conditions you approved? A.—I surmise I did.

Asked if he didn't think the check it inconsistent with the true condition of affairs, Reading replied that that deduction might be drawn. He said he noticed it was the check of the parent corporation

Q.—And the prima facia fact was a check to you from the parent company and you had endorsed it? A.—Just seeing the check and nothing else one might draw that inference. But not a dollar was drawn out of the bank.

Reading said he believed the directors had been given goodwill stock in the Boston subsidiary prior to that time.

Q.—What did you think it was given for? A.—I never understood its full purpose. But I suppose it was ostensible payment for the stock.

Q.—Why did you go through such a process as that—you a director and counsel of the Boston company? A.—This transaction was entirely new and novel to me. Hatfield said the other directors had done the same thing.

Q.—Who was making the goodwill gift of stock. A.—I understood that was coming from the United company.

Q.—Did you think the United of Worcester was making a payment for services to be rendered? A.—Yes.

STICKS TO HIS ANSWER.

Parker then called Reading's attention to his testimony before the rules committee when he answered in the negative a question of Representative Washburn as to whether he was ever retained as counsel or advisory counsel for the "L. A. Wolfe Company."

Q.—Was that answer to Washburn complete and full? A.—I thought so then and I think so now.

At the Oct. 28 meeting the cards which Joseph A. Lincoln testified showed a $9,000 falsification in the United accounts were exhibited, Reading admitted. Asked if they showed falsification, Reading replied they proved nothing. He could not recall that any one at the meeting had stated there had been falsification.

NO FALSIFICATION PROVED.

Parker inquired if the attorney-general had heard Lincoln's interpretation of the cards, and Reading replied in the negative. The witness maintained the cards showed merely a difference of opinion. He said he was satisfied no falsification could be proved.

When he took up with Wolfe the matter of the overcharge, he was satisfied there was no criminal issue involved, Reading stated.

Q.—Did you consider it settled because it could not be proved? A.—Yes.

On November 10, after he had talked with Wolfe, Reading decided to take up private employment for the L. A. W. subsidiary, he said. To this statement Parker made a lengthy rejoinder and Reading inquired: "Is it necessary to make speeches?"

"You will have to accept the situation as it is," Parker replied.

DIDN'T WARN WOLFE.

A series of questions disclosed the fact that Reading had not warned Wolfe that anything he might say might be used against him. Parker expressed surprise at the answers.

Q.—Didn't you realize that anything he might tell you might be used in criminal proceedings? A.—I think you're wrong. It isn't necessary to warn a person of his rights until after his arrest.

Q.—We will not debate that. You gave him no warning and proceeded to interrogate him? A.—I did.

The capacity in which Reading was acting, at the first conference with Wolfe in the attorney-general's office was the subject of many questions.

NEITHER THIS NOR THAT

Q.—Weren't you acting as counsel for the Boston subsidiary? A.—I was not. Reading then stated he was not acting as attorney-general, either.

Q.—Then, what was the occasion, as you view it, of summoning Wolfe to come to the office of the attorney-general? A.—I didn't summon him.

Reading said he expressly told Wolfe he was not acting in his official capacity.

Q.—Did you tell him you wanted to talk to him as a director? A.—After he came into my office.

Reading said Mitchell, the police inspector attached to his office, went to Worcester to find Wolfe as a personal favor to the attorney-general, and that it was not the first time the inspector or others attached to his office had done him favors in their leisure time.

Q.—Prior to that conference did you have a talk with Dist. Atty. Rugg at Worcester? A.—I did.

Q.—When you communicated with Rugg over the phone was there any thought then in your mind of criminology as regards the United at Worcester? A.—There was not.

DENIES RUGG'S STATEMENT.

Parker then called to Reading's attention the testimony of Dist. Atty. Rugg, who stated Reading had called to him on the phone inquiring whether the grand jury was in session and saying he "had a big larceny from a Worcester company" called to his attention.

Q.—Is that statement correct? A.—I don't believe it is.

Q.—Do you think the district attorney has stated other than it was? A.—I do (loudly).

Q.—And you think the district attorney of Worcester, telling of his talk with the attorney-general of Massachusetts, inserted the word "larceny?" A.—District Attorney Rugg made no report on the conversation and appeared before this committee without preparation, and I say he has made an incorrect report. I say he is mistaken in his recollection of the statement I made to him, and I do not challenge his motives.

The attorney-general said he called Rugg so that if something came to light he would be in a position to know if the grand jury was in session.

THOUGHT WOLFE WAS FAIR.

Mitchell's trip to Worcester was four or five days after his talk with Rugg, Reading said. The attorney-general said Wolfe impressed him with his attitude of fairness and honesty and he found no further occasion to inquire as to possible criminality.

Q.—And you were satisfied because of what Wolfe said to you? A.—Yes.

Reading could not recall that he had discussed any falsification of records with the United head. He said he did not tell Wolfe if restitution was made the inquiry would be closed.

Reading admitted he had not told Wolfe he was not acting as attorney-general, and it might have been better if he had.

Q.—And Wolfe didn't think he was making those offers under duress? A.—No.

The ttorney-general said he had not been told Wolfe had drawn large sums of money from the treasury without vouchers.

Q.—Did you think the surrender of personal property of value, which he was required to surrender, was a confession of guilt? A.—I did not.

Reading said hes reason was insisting the so-called "gentleman's agreement" be submitted to Dist. Atty. Rugg was because George Gaskill, Wolfe's attorney, had raised the question as to the capacity in which Reading was acting.

Q.—It did not occur to you that it might appear to be a condemnation of a crime? A.—No.

Q.—Why didn't you submit the whole matter to the district attorney at the very beginning? A.—There was no evidence of any kind on which to submit it.

Q.—But there came a time when you inquired of the district attorney with respect to an inquiry. A.—I intended to have a Grand Jury hearing, a John Doe proceeding, if I could not get the information any other way.

With reference to Reading submitting the agreement to Rugg, Parker asked: "Did you think it might have the appearance of improper conduct as attorney general?"

A.—I didn't but I was playing safe.

Q.—Why were you playing safe? A.—Oh, I suppose we all have spasms of painstaking care.

Wild Goose Killed by Stark Mail Plane; Knocks Off Lamp

Howard Stark, Boston airmail pilot, who holds the record of never having made a forced landing, violated his usual custom today and admitted his trip to New York contained an incident worth repeating. According to Stark, who always drives his plane at top speed, he overtook a wild goose near New London, and before he realized it had cut the bird down with his "prop." He continued on his way, and on arrival at Hadley Field, N. J., discovered that one of his 8-inch landing lamps had been knocked from a wing.

$70,000 SECRET GIFT TO SMITH 'FOR LOVE'

Washington, May 16 (AP)—Going into campaigns of Herbert Hoover and Alfred E. Smith, the Senate investigating committee was told today Rush Holland, working for Hoover, expended $10,000, and that the heaviest financial backers of the New York Governor donated out of "love and affection."

Holland testified his outlay included $2000 to Perry Howard, negro Republican national committeeman for Mississippi, and $2000 to Ben W. Davis, negro committeeman for Georgia.

William G. Kenny, New York contractor, told the committee he contributed $70,000 to the Smith fund and was ready to give more. He expected no favors, declaring he was a lifelong friend of the Governor.

He had held New York city contracts, but his business did not bring him into contact with the New York Public Service Commission, he said.

"I'LL GIVE MORE"

Kenny told the committee he made three donations to the Smith campaign, $10,000 on November 4, $40,000 February 24, and $20,000 April 12.

"Mr. Van Namee told us $50,000 of this was in loans," Chairman Steiwer said.

"From my standpoint all were contributions," Kenny replied. "They told me they needed money and I gave it. I don't know what construction Van Namee placed upon it."

"Do you expect to make further contributions?" asked Steiwer.

"I do—at any time it is needed."

"Have you placed any limit on the amount?"

"Only my ability to pay."

"Have you talked to Governor Smith about your contributions?

"Never. He knew nothing about it until this investigation began. There was no reason why I should tell him."

William H. Todd of New York, the shipbuilder, was asked about his $5000 contribution to the Smith fund. He said he paid it to James Riordon.

HOPES TO GIVE MORE

"Do you expect to make any further contributions to Governor Smith's campaign?"

"I hope so. I'm willing to. I will give anything I can, and that is needed. I will do that because of my affection and love for Governor Smith plus his ability."

"Have you contributed to Governor Smith's New York campaigns?"

"Always."

"Has your business brought you into contractual relations with the State or city of New York?"

"With the State, no; with the city, in a small way. I built two ferry boats for the city, getting the contract under competitive bidding."

Permanent Wave for the Cat's Whiskers Should Come Next

Paris, May 16 (AP)—Permanently waved eyelashes is the latest craze of the ultra-chic and eccentric Parisienne, whose extreme coquetry is no longer satisfied by curling and blackening.

A deft hand and special dainty, miniature tongs are required, and, of course, long, silky lashes. Even so the result is often more wonderful than pleasing, and the fashion does not appear destined to be either widespread or long-lived.

WHITE ROSE BAKERIES PLAN BIG "AD" CAMPAIGN

Photographs of Boston boys and girls at school and play, reflecting abundant energy supplied by eating wholesome bread, are a feature of a newspaper advertising campaign soon to be launched by the White Rose bakeries. More than 100 White Rose salesmen who daily provide Greater Boston storekeepers with fresh-baked loaves met at a two days' convention, under the direction of E. C. Harris, manager of the Boston White Rose bakery, and were shown these photographic proofs of healthy childhood.

Plans for extending the White Rose clientele were discussed and George N. Merritt of the George Batten Company, advertising agents, told the salesmen of the campaign which will run throughout the year. Another speaker was G. V. Davis, salesmanager, whose remarks on intensive selling were received with enthusiasm.

SHE PUT ARM IN LION'S MOUTH TO SAVE PET

Oakland, Cal., May 16 (AP)—Princess is frolicking around the Nannetti home here as usual today only because her mistress was brave enough to risk the possible loss of an arm to save the beast's life.

Princess is a huge lioness, pet of Mrs. Nancy Lee Nannetti for several years. Last Saturday a thin splinter of bone became lodged in the animal's throat, causing her great pain and impairing her breathing. The big cat, thoroughly domesticated, came whimpering for aid to Mrs. Nannetti, who sought the help of veterinarians. None of them would risk working on the lioness.

Forcing open Princess' mouth, Mrs. Nannetti thrust her arm down the lioness' throat until she could feel the bone splinter. Although Princess by closing her jaws or even drawing away could have mangled Mrs. Nannetti's arm, she submitted patiently. Mrs. Nannetti was unable to draw the splinter out, but finally dislodged it so that it made its way into the animal's stomach.

The cat's relief was instant, and she showed her affection in truly feline fashion, fawning on her mistress and licking her hand with her tongue.

Later a veterinarian removed the bone from the animal's stomach.

"Old Gold's smoothness was so obvious" said Miss Anne Morgan after the Blindfold Cigarette test

"A decorator once told me that to appreciate the texture of a fabric or the glaze of a vase one's eyes should be closed. And to enjoy the fragrance of a perfume one should close one's eyes . . . one's other senses seem all the keener. That was the convincing thing about the blindfold test. The aroma and the flavor of one cigarette were so marked . . . the smoothness so obvious that I chose it instantly. It proved to be the OLD GOLD."

Why you can pick them . . . even in the dark

In this scientific cigarette test a blindfolded smoker tries four leading brands. The only question asked is, "Which one do you like best?"

Why should one cigarette win time after time? What gives OLD GOLDS their captivating charm? The answer is very simple: heart-leaf tobacco. No heavy, coarse top leaves of the tobacco plant . . . no withered ground leaves. Only the cool and fragrant heart-leaves are good enough for OLD GOLD.

It's sheer quality that gives OLD GOLDS their honey-like smoothness. Do you wonder that they win . . . even in the dark?

cident and you'd better hurry up to the house.'

"Well, there isn't much more to tell. That little pal of mine, she—she wasn't at the window watching for me as usual.

"For an instant I faltered. It just seemed as though something within me went dead, and then I had to fight hard for breath.

"In a little time I went out to the gate, just as I had that very morning. And I looked down the street, as best I could. Right over there, a short block away, was where she turned the corner—passed forever out of my life.

"Today, it was my little girl.

"Tomorrow, or the next day, it will be some other little pal, quite as dear.

"And so, on and on, until the conscience of men shall cry a halt to this passion for fast driving in localities where danger, obvious danger, stares every driver plumb in the eye."

If every operator of a car, especially if he has a child, could read these words, what a lesson he would learn!

Why all this hurry?

There is one thing every driver of a motor vehicle must learn, if we are to stop this slaughter of the innocents, and that is, that he is driving an engine of death, and the pedestrian, whether child or adult, is helpless in his path.

In other words the burden is upon the driver to see to it that he does not hit a person. He has no right to assume that a child, or an aged person in particular, in going to jump out of his way, because we know from experience, that they are just as likely to jump into his way.

Mrs. A. P. Brooks, 12 Frothingham ave., Charlestown, writes:

A year ago my husband and I and the children were taking a walk. We saw two little girls, each about six years of age, get run over and killed. My little girl still talks about it.

My children are: Eva, eight, Earl, five, Al J., three, and Edward, five months old. Will close wishing you luck in your safety drive.

Mrs. Anna V. Gibson, Sterling Junction, Mass.:

Mothers today live in constant terror because of the danger to their little folk on the public highways, and any one who can improve conditions in this matter, should have a vote of thanks from the entire nation.

My eldest girl is 14, a freshman at high school, then comes a boy of 11, a girl of eight and the baby, seven. Their father has been dead for three years, so the entire responsibility and welfare depends on me.

I am enclosing my "Don'ts," both for mothers and children. I have tried to impress them on my children's minds.

I wish you luck in your campaign.

Mrs. E. M. O'Neill, 83 Pleasant st., Woburn:

I am enclosing a list of "Don'ts" which I have tried to impress upon the minds of my own children and hope they may help others who are not fortunate enough to have a mother to watch over them. I have five boys, ages 10, 14, 16, 18 and 19.

$150.00 Reward for Best "Dont's" on Safety

The Boston Evening American is offering 78 cash prizes for the most effective sets of ten "Mothers' Safety Don'ts" to guard children from the auto peril.

The first prize will be $50, second $15; third $10, and there will be 75 $1 prizes.

Awards will be made on common sense, practical views, rather than for literary effort.

The judges are Mrs Alvan T. Fuller, wife of the governor, Capt. George A. Parker, registrar of motor vehicles, Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson and Assistant Superintendent Augustine L. Rafter of the Boston public schools.

Kindly write your "Don'ts" on a separate sheet, using one side of the paper. In your letter state number of children, and ages. Write legibly and include name and address. Direct letters to Editor Mothers' Safety Don'ts, Boston Evening American, Boston, Mass.

Write early. Remember the contest is already under way. We want to hear from all the mothers.

Cool and rapid aid rendered by her landlady today saved the life of Miss Nellie Dolan, 60, lodger in a Lawrence st., South End, house, when a sleeve of her dress ignited from the flame of "canned heat" while preparing breakfast.

Her screams brought Mrs. Annie A. Coan, the landlady, racing to the room. Mrs. Coan seized a shawl and smothered the flames, then summoned police.

They ought to rejoice they have gained 250,000,000 modern dollars, and use some of that money to develop or revive art in their own country. They have plenty of art left in museums and it doesn't matter whether Raphael's Madonna and Child stays in the private house of Lady Desborough, or moves to millionaire John Snooks' home in America. FIND FIRST BODY OF 9 DROWNED BROCKTON MEN

Greenville, Me., May 16—Moosehead lake today gave up the first of its 10 dead, drowned Friday night with the foundering of the motorboat Mac. The body of Dr. David Bridgwood, one of nine prominent Brockton citizens bound for a fishing camp when the tragedy occurred, was recovered in 60 feet of water, 300 yards from shore.

Walter MacLaren

In the boat which recovered Dr. Bridgwood's body was Harley Buddin, brother of the guide who was a victim. Dr. Bridgwood was the first to leap from the boat when it started to sink. He was closely followed by Capt. Lays, the only survivor.

A fleet of craft, led by a 50-foot lake steamer, grappled the waters today.

CHARGE 'GRAFT' IN HUB SCHOOL LAND DEAL

Charges of graft in connection with the city of Boston's purchase of a site in Eliot sq., Roxbury, for an intermediate school, were aired at a public hearing of the Finance Commission in its rooms at 11 Beacon st., today.

Atty. John C. L. Dowling for the commission said the city paid $85,865.44 for land appraised at $45,000, and the owners of the property, Samuel and Gussie Lavine, made several mysterious withdrawals of money from the bank after the settlement.

The hearing was enlivened by the words of Chairman Francis E. Slattery of the Schoolhouse Commission, who charged the commission with falsehood in saying the School Committee preferred a Lambert ave. site to the one selected.

"This was as clean a matter as was ever put through in this city," declared Chairman Slattery.

In outlining the case for the committee Atty. Dowling said that organization had protested against the amount paid by the city for the land, adding there is a bill in court for further compensation.

He said he would attempt to show that while the taking of the land was pending, the Lavines borrowed $2000 in cash and this was not deposited in Lavine's bank account. After the payment of the award, the balance, $58,976.94, remaining when taxes and mortgages were deducted, was deposited in Lavine's name, according to Dowling.

BUYING SOCONY SPECIAL SOON GETS TO BE A HABIT

"good morning, motor"

"MORNING, Boss. Say, Boss, that oil we got last night wasn't so good. I've a pain all along my crank shaft that feels serious—you know, kind of burning. I wish you'd be a little more careful about oil, anyway. I have that awful 'morning after' feeling.

"Don't run away, Boss, I want to talk to you seriously. It's this way. I would like to do a good job for you this summer, get you there and back without a whimper, take hills on high, pep in traffic. But I must get a square deal. I may have an iron constitution but my digestion is as delicate as yours. You have fed me gas at times that a Diesel couldn't explode. And will you please understand that I must have good oil? That stuff you bought last night, for instance. I heard you. 'Gimme some oil,' says you, and at a strange pump, too. Say, if that was oil, I'm a Swiss watch. As a result, I'm all gummed up. My bearings don't feel right, valves are sticky. If you had fed me good oil, I'd be purring like a new engine this morning. Think it over, Boss. I cost a lot of money, but I am only as good as the gas and oil you give me."

WATCH the cars that draw up beside the new Socony Special Gasoline pump. Some of them are brand new, with high compression motors. Others are veterans still purring softly in spite of their carbonized cylinders. And they come back for more every time they have their tanks filled.

What for? Especially when, as you may have reflected, they can get 100% transportation out of regular Socony Gasoline, match mileage records with anybody, and never hear a snort or a splutter from their engines and save the extra cents.

The answer, of course, is that Socony Special is a high-test fuel for motorists who want a little smarter pickup in traffic, a new, silken note in the sound of their engines, a complete absence of knocking, and a perceptibly stronger surge of power on the hills. Nothing that is absolutely essential but how they like it!

Maybe you will too. Fill up your tank today with Socony Special Gasoline. Like all Socony Gasoline and Socony Motor Oil it is tested thirteen times before it reaches your car.

Let your motor be the judge

"LITTLE SINS" By KATHARINE BRUSH

A Story of Gay Life at Harvard

Gay Leonard, spoiled darling of fortune, is loved by Alan Pomery, a worthwhile athletic young man. She is fascinated, however, by Jerry Davis of questionable reputation. To get her away from him her family take her on an eight months' trip. Meanwhile she thinks only of Jerry. She is jealous of Dolly Quinn, whom he has met in a cabaret where Dolly has taken a job as hostess to earn extra money for art lessons. While Gay is away Jerry falls in love with Dolly and tells her so, but she does not care for him in that way. Through Nick Standish, a newspaper man, she is selected to enter a beauty contest. Jerry protests in vain. Gay comes back and is a guest at a lively house party nearby. Mrs. Matthews, her hostess, admits that she would like to see Gay marry Alan.

CHAPTER 15

ALAN POMEROY had just finished shaving, and was engaged in drying his razor on an embroidered linen towel (which got cut slightly). He whistled as his fingers moved, a gentle whistle like a long sigh syncopated; somehow the pursing of his lips made his gray eyes look very round and ingenuous and young. His hair was wet from his shower, but he had not yet attacked it with brushes and comb; it lay in tight ruddy kinks all over his head. he would presently swear at these kinks. He always did.

He was imposing, standing there, his long straight legs in evening trousers planted wide apart, his bare shoulders huge and compact and bronzed with summer swims, bulging from the armholes of a tight white undershirt. He was superb. He reminded you of things. Life guards. Left tackles. Stokers of coal in mammoth furnaces. Builders of nations. Discoverers of continents. The glistening, rippling shoulders of the galley slaves of old. . . .

Alan tucked his razor into its velvet-lined casket and strolled into the adjoining room. Here, across one of the twin beds, slept Pierce Brown, his roommate for the week-end. Pierce slept efficiently but not attractively, on his back with his mouth open. He snored.

"Hey!" said Alan, and shook him. "Come to!"

When, after some three minutes of this, Pierce had neither come to nor promised by so much as the bat of an eyelash to do so in due time, Alan lifted him up bodily, bore him into the bathroom, deposited him smartly in the tub, and turned on the shower.

Pierce came to, and was much offended. He said, "Damn it all, you ash. I'm not right jush tired." Even after his benefactor had returned to the bedroom he was to be heard plaintively, almost tearfully, protesting.

Alan whistled as he finished dressing. A whole repertoire of mellow tunes. "When I'm By Your Side" as accompanied to the insertion of shirt studs. "Tell Me What I Want to Be Told" while putting on the shirt. "I Love My Girl" during the combat with the collar. He was happy. Everything combined to make him happy.

There was this vacation: three weeks in which to play, and sleep late, and forget the advertising business. There was this house party; four days of ragtime rollicking. There was Gay. Right here, under this same roof, where he could see her and touch her and listen to the silver song of her voice.

"If I yelled 'Gay!' right now," he said to himself, "she'd hear me. She's that near." This thought elated him oddly. She had been so far away, so long. . . .

Alan Pomeroy had a whole heart to give to Gay. No fragments worth mentioning had been chipped off and lost to the lesser loves of the average gentleman's 'teens and early twenties. In college they had called him a woman-hater. The epithet was figuratively but not literally applicable. Alan never hated women; he simply preferred men, just as he preferred outdoors to indoors, pipes to cigarettes, old clothes to new. He was essentially a man's man. . . . until he met Gay. After that he was Gay's man, if she wanted him.

He had loved her rather terribly and painfully for two years, but it seemed to him now that until a week ago, when she returned from her long stay in Europe, he had not known at all what love was. In a week the most astounding change had taken place; in an instant, really, for his memory dated it as simultaneously with his new first sight of her.

He had met her at the boat. He had stood on the pier, jostled by officials and photographers and reporters and families and other stupid meaningless people. And she had come smiling down the gangplank to him. Like a light. Like a flower Like the essence of a dream. Like Spring.

He had chortled, holding her hands, "Gee, Gay! Gee, I'm glad to see you!" He recalled that now angrily. He, who would have spoken with the tongues of angels, had found no words but those trite words, the very words in which the shopkeeper beside him was greeting his beefy red buyer. . .

Later he had said, "I'd forgotten —" And stopped.

"Hmm?" Her silver voice.

"Nothing. Just—I guess I'd almost forgotten how beautiful you are."

His love for her was unaccountably different from that day. It was greater. It was stronger, more importunate; different altogether. She had always been to him a thing that he worshiped and yearned for hopelessly. Now she had become a thing that he must have.

Driving down here to the Matthews' a few hours ago in his roadster, he had sought to tell her something of this. He had peered at her as she reclined low in the seat beside him, one sculptured leg dangling from the bent knee of the other, her figure provocative in thin black

O. K. CHELSEA-REVERE LINE BILL

MANY CANDY MAKERS AID HEARST HEALTH DRIVE

Dr. P. H. Mullowney

Director Hearst Health Laboratory

The campaign of the Hearst Health Laboratory for the abolition of certain objectionable practices in the candy trade is having a marked effect. Already some of the larger and more responsible manufacturers have discontinued their former custom of selling "seconds" to jobbers. In previous articles it has been pointed out that there are certain inherent dangers to a reputable brand in this practice. In one case it was found where certain unwholesome left-overs were resold by the salvage buyer as original goods.

Dr. Mullowney

Another source of pride for this column has been the success attendant on efforts to require the protection of candies exposed on shelves and counters to the possible contamination of dirt, dust and insect pests. There has been a big improvement in the way of having proper protection under glass furnished this delicate product. The work continues to go on, and even within the last day or so two places in the market district have been called to the attention of the health authorities, who have furnished co-operative action.

In another instance, following a letter of complaint from a reader, indicating improper protection furnished different candy products, investigation was made. When the complaint was found justified, corrective action was instituted.

Our readers are urged to take an active interest in violations of the laws and regulations pertaining to the sale and handling of foodstuffs.

"Address your letters to the Hearst Health Laboratory, 5 Winthrop sq. Prompt attention will be given every complaint.

In this connection I desire to say

TROLLEY FARE PROBLEM MAY NOW BE SETTLED

A bill providing an entirely new solution of the Revere and Chelsea street railway transportation problem, amounting in the opinion of many legislators virtually to public ownership, was favorably reported today by the House ways and means committee.

The demand by Chelsea and Revere residents for a one-fare trolley service to Boston has been a major problem for years, the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway and the Boston Elevated being unable to agree on a purchase price which would enable the latter to take over that division and operate it.

The bill reported today solves the problem by authorizing the two cities to establish jointly a body politic and corporate to be called the Revere-Chelsea Transportation District.

This district would be under control of a commission of three to be appointed by the Governor, each member to serve six years.

Moreover, the Department of Public Utilities would be empowered to revaluate the Chelsea-Revere division of the Eastern Massachusetts road and the commission managing the transportation district would be authorized to purchase at the figure thus fixed, or to take by right of eminent domain in case of dispute. The commission could then lease or sell to the Elevated.

BARS AIRPORT AT STATE CAMP

Holding that the land is the property of all the citizens and municipalities of the state and should not be turned over to sole use by one municipality, Governor Fuller today returned "without approval" the bill to allow use of the Framingham campground for aircraft.

An attempt to override the veto in the House failed by a vote of 96 for overriding to 102 against.

The State campground was authorized to be sold some time ago, but when the best offer, $60,000, was not accepted and the time limit for sale expired, the town of Framingham petitioned for permission to use the territory for aircraft leases.

Radio Dialog

THE BELL LABORATORIES and the General Electric Company have been expending huge sums of money and infinite patience and time in developing the illusory will-o'-the-wisp of television. Laboratory experiments have shown that it is possible to transmit hazy images over short distances, and there is now in operation a fixed schedule of television broadcasts from WGY, Schenectady, three afternoons a week. No enthusiast has been discovered in Greater Boston who has been able to pick up these signals with sufficient strength to form a picture.

Rush to Manufacture

SEVERAL of the most aggressive of the local manufacturers, firms notable for being in advance at all times with equipment of technical excellence, confess that they have had no success whatsoever in picking pictures out of the air. Meanwhile, numerous manufacturers are preparing to put so-called television apparatus on the market on short notice. It is significant, however, that in no case is any statement of this sort forthcoming from any of the successful and nationally known manufacturers of radio apparatus. The sponsors of the new television sets are largely among the ranks of the commercially unknown.

Vision Chain Forming

TODAY an announcement of similar character informs the radio world that a radio vision broadcast syndicate is in process of development. Its purpose is to deliver a service of television to the entire American continent. Undoubtedly when television has been perfected such a chain will find a profitable field for its activities. At present, however, the baby science is like most babies, very interesting, but in some ways darned troublesome. The average listener will do well to wait till it has outgrown its swaddling clothes before getting excited about the miracle of seeing the unseen. A visit to a well equipped spiritualistic salon will be more entertaining to the thrill seeker.

Commissioner in Warning

A WARNING which is timely is sounded by O. H. Caldwell, Federal Radio Commissioner. "Great care should be taken by persons proposing to invest in television propositions, to make sure that commercial television application will measure up to the bright prospects indicated in the laboratory experiments," he says.

Difficulties to Surmount

"THE ENTHUSIASTIC INVENTOR should remember that not only the problems of television transmission and reception have to be overcome, but the problem of fitting television into the wave spectrum has to be surmounted simultaneously before television can become a service to the public," he states further.

Few Vision Channels

"ACCORDING to our present knowledge, a very wide frequency band will be required for any satisfactory television operation, and it is already apparent that only a few "such bands can be put into service."

Experimental

"THE FEDERAL RADIO COMMISSION has been disposed to grant to laboratories the use of the ether for experimenting, but to date, engineers have largely devised things just to put on the wavelengths rather than devise methods of fitting devices into narrower limits on the all-to-small radio spectrum."

Fenway Park, May 16—The Boston Red Sox and the Detroit Tigers met today in their first series at Fenway Park this season before 2500 fans. The Red Hose were out to make it five straight victories, while the Tigers were just as determined to break their losing streak, which now has run to five games.

Bill Carrigan sent in Herb Bradley, a right handed youngster, while his opponent was Sorrell.

FIRST INNING.

Tigers—Galloway walked. Neun forced Galloway, Bradley to Gerber. Neun stole second. Rice walked. Hellmann also walked. Gehringer hit into a double play, Regan to Gerber to Todt. NO RUNS.

Red Sox—Flagstead singled. Todt sacrificed, Warner to Neun. Myer bunted, scoring Flagstead. K. Williams singled, scoring Myer. Regan fanned. Taitt doubled, K. Williams stopping at third. Gerber lined to Hellman. TWO RUNS.

HARVARD CREW OFF TOMORROW

The Harvard varsity crew will leave tomorrow for the big regatta against Navy and Pennsylvania crews on Saturday.

There is still a slight chance that Charles Mason, who rowed the first varsity race against Tech, will be back at his No. 4 seat for Saturday's race, but McKim Norton, the New Yorker, is still filling his shoes while Mason's hand—infected a week ago—is given more time to heal.

Mason was out of the Tech-Cornell race on Saturday and it does not seem likely that Norton will be displaced before Saturday. Meanwhile Ben S. Greer is taking Norton's No. 4 seat in the junior varsity crew.

With this exception the two varsity crews are definitely settled. Capt. Jack Watts, Gay Mercer, [illegible] Ed Saltonstall, Norton, [illegible] Allerton Campbell and Lawrence Locke, will compose the varsity shell.

The crew squad, headed by Coach Ed Brown, will leave tomorrow on the [illegible] train, arriving in Philadelphia early the next morning. The crews will be quartered at the Pennsylvania Hotel and will row both in the morning and afternoon on Friday.

GREENLEAF LEADING IN BILLIARD TITLE MATCH

New York, May 16—Ralph Greenleaf, pocket billiard champion, today leads Andrew St. Jean by a score of 303 to 300 in their special match. Greenleaf won the third block, 119 to 71, in nine innings. St. Jean took the [illegible] block, which also lasted nine innings by a score of 193 to 123.

They're a Puzzle — So Is Mickey Walker — Our Own Glenna

The Watter twins, Eddie (on left) and Clarence are as puzzling to race horse fans as the horses themselves. It's a tough job telling them apart.

Would you believe this was Mickey Walker, middleweight champion? If it wasn't for that Irish smile you would think him Fred Fulton.

Miss Alice Buckman won the right field berth on the Griswold high baseball team beating five boys for the position.

Glenna Collett, former American champion, who was eliminated from the British championship by Miss Wragg.

Nat. League Fight Wild, Says Hornsby

Dear Lou:

Five weeks of this 1928 season have now gone into history, and it's just as hard now to dope out these large league races as it was before the old bell rang. This has been the wildest spring I remember, and also the coldest, and some of the clubs in both leagues have been all shot to pieces.

But now that warm days are with us occasionally, the races ought to settle into real form.

The National League continues to shape up like the wildest dog fight in history. The Pirates, Giants, Cards, Reds and Cubs have already produced contendership class, and the Robins have been sticking right in there with them. The Braves after the flu was waved out, naturally staggered around a lot.

No club can get along without good pitching, and we didn't have half a dozen well tossed games in the whole first month. No wonder we rank down with the Phils.

Kent Greenfield, who was one of the best right handers in the league last summer after the Braves grabbed him, spent the first two weeks of the race in bed, and he is just getting his strength back now. The same goes for Bob Smith, and Arthur Delaney, a new boy from the Coast, who showed real possibilities in the training season.

I still believe our club will be in there, even though we have quite an early gap to make up for. But we have the power and anytime the pitchers can turn in five or six regular afternoons in a row, this ball club will be whirling around with the bunch.

It is my honest opinion that every club in the National League except the Phils has a shot for the top. The Giants went through a flu spell, but managed to hang on without losing a great deal of ground, and now they have Cohen and Terry back on the job again.

The western teams come to our part of the country next week, and they are sure to get real entertainment.

The Braves will profit by a long stand in that new short park, and the friendly home crowds will help to bring back the club spirit. They don't make fans any more sincere or fairer anywhere else in the world.

Connie Mack and his Athletics aren't going to let your club run away with the American League race, the way it looks now. That is a fine, hard-hitting outfit, and Connie has some great pitchers. Any club with three good left-handers like Grove, Walberg and Orwall, just can't land very far from the top of any race.

If ONE or two clubs can take a fall out of that smacking gang of yours now and then, you boys will have to put on world series steam about the Fourth of July, instead of getting ready to coast home.

This is going to be a surprising baseball year, I think. Just look at the way some of the kids and some of the birds who were due for the air are going along. Bissonette, new Dodger first baseman, is showing the crowd in our league the way to hit homers. He threatens to give the Babe and yourself a race of it.

They tell me that Easterling with the Detroit Tigers can smack that apple right on the nose, too. And have you noticed how Andy High has been belting the ball for the Cards? Looks like living and playing at home has made a new player out of Andy.

When the Braves let him go in the Bell trade, it was a cinch that Andy would be shipped along to some minor league club. I did hear that a deal had been fixed with Toledo. But the Cards had to stick Andy in there and how he started to hit! I suppose that's the way you and Babe will get going any day now. Hope the same goes for the Braves.

Yours truly,

Rogers Hornsby

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

Although Billy McPhail, who was the last to win The Country Club cup, will not compete, the field at Clyde Park promises to be faster and larger than it has been in years. All 10 and under players in the State are eligible for this event. The qualifying round will be played tomorrow and the low 16 will start match play on Friday morning.

BUNIONEERS FACE STIFF TEST

Erie, Pa., May 16 (INS)—"Cross-Country" Pyle's brigade of blisters advanced into New York state today on their 63-mile trek to Jamestown, preparatory to the final sprints that will carry the 10 leaders into the stretch on the $48,500 prize money at New York.

Andrew Payne, youthful Oklahoman, who leads the big parade with an elapsed time of 5[illegible] for [illegible] appears an almost certain winner, but still is reserved enough not to extend his palm for the $25,000 purse that is the victor's award.

"I remember what happened to Gavuzzi just the other day," Payne said. "He had a comfortable lead over me. Then things went wrong and he went out. Before him Willie Kolehmainen, Arthur Newton, Charley Hart, Ollie Wanttinen and other great runners met misfortune. The last 600 odd miles are the hardest. Anything may happen."

John Salo, Passaic, N. J., Finnish-American, who holds second place, [illegible] hours 49 minutes and 27 seconds behind Payne, refused to divulge whether he calculated setting a pace aimed to "crack" his rival.

"Payne has a nice edge," Salo said. "I'm still going ahead and hoping that I be carried through somewhere in the money division."

Ed Gardner, Seattle negro who was ready to drop out a week ago with shin splints, sprang a big surprise yesterday on the 45.8-mile lap from Ashtabula, O., setting the pace [illegible]. Twenty-three minutes, 32 seconds behind him was Giusto Umek, champion of Italy, who advanced from sixth to fifth place on the day's performance.

COAST BACKS M'LARNIN

New York, May 16 (AP)—A rush of West Coast support, which sent the odds down to 6 to 5 on the champion, indicated today that Jimmy McLarnin, Los Angeles slugger, would be close to an even choice when he seeks to wrest the lightweight crown from Sammy Mandell at the Polo Grounds tomorrow night in a 15-round match.

Until the McLarnin money began pouring in yesterday, Mandell had ruled a 7 to 5 favorite. The McLarnin backers were asking 2½ to 1 that the coast star knocks out the champion. A bet of $1000 at these odds was reported by one Broadway firm.

While Mandell was confining his activities to some road work and enough exercise to keep his muscles limber at his training camp in Orangeburgh, N. Y., the challenger unexpectedly put on gloves and boxed four fast rounds with Ritchie Randolph, a sparring partner, at Pompton Lakes, N. J. Both boxers planned to take it easy today and then come to New York tomorrow for weighing in.

MISS COLLETT ELIMINATED, 3 AND 2

6 and 3, and winning from Miss Doris Chambers, former champion, 6 and 5.

Mrs. Stewart Hanley, Detroit, and Miss Elizabeth Curtis, Clinton, Ia., were eliminated with Miss Collett in the fourth round.

Mrs. Hurd meets Miss Fowler tomorrow morning and if successful will play the winner of the Wragg-Marshall match in the semi-finals in the afternoon.

Glenna Is Beaten at Hunstanton, 3 and 2

Hunstanton, Eng., May [illegible] (AP)—Inability to cope with English spring weather at its worst and the steadiness of Mabel Wragg, determined little Yorkshire woman, today removed Glenna Collett from the British golf championship in the fourth round.

The American girl's ambition to take the trophy to the United States for the first time was shattered when she lost, 3 up and 2 to play, in a match in which she never was on her game.

Miss Collett's defeat, one of the greatest upsets of British golf, was due in part to the weather conditions, which included hail, rain and a cold gale, but it is only fair to say that the English girl adjusted her game to the prevailing conditions better than the American player.

The American challenger might have weathered the storm and won if she had been able to sink some of her putts early in the match. But her hands were numb with cold, the putter grip wet and slippery and her putting on the outward holes contributed to her later defeat.

The storm also swept Miss Elizabeth Curtis, Clinton, Ia., and Mrs. Stewart Hanley, Detroit, out of the championship, leaving Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd of Philadelphia, but born in Britain, as the lone American challenge.

Miss Collett's defeat came on the 16th green, where she so decisively knocked out Mrs. Temple Dobell yesterday. After being 3 down at the 11th, the American had steadied to win the 12th and have three holes running. Hope ran high among her friends that she would yet pull herself together and climb.

Out of the hole she had dug for herself. Then to their dismay she stood on the [illegible]th tee, high on a ridge facing the sea from which the harsh wind swept, took a wood club for the shot to the green 1[illegible] yards away, and half smothered the ball.

SEIZES OPPORTUNITY.

Miss Wragg seized the unexpected opportunity. She put a perfect shot six yards to the left of the pin. After that only a sterling niblick could save Glenna and she was not performing miracles today. She sent a mashie niblic to the green and putted past the hole. Miss Wragg laid her approach putt dead and Glenna ran across the green with both hands outstretched in congratulation.

The American seemed to welcome the relief from the agony of playing under such condition. The little gallery which had struggled through the storm with the players applauded as much for Miss Collett as for the English girl who had beaten the girl picked to win the title.

Miss Collett's mother was the first to greet her as she stepped off the green. Miss Curtis and the other Americans actually wept over the defeat of their star.

Glenna's eyes were dimmed, too, but with dissatisfaction at her unsuccessful attempts to control the ball rather than at losing her chance at the championship.

MR. BOSTON

By Jack Conway

"THE death of Joseph J. Lannin, former Red Sox owner, takes from sport one of its most colorful figures," said Mr. Boston today. "I have known Lannin intimately since he bought the Sox back in 1913.

"The real reason why Lannin purchased a ball club was because he was a fan and wanted to get as close to the game as possible. He cheered with the most pop eyed of the fanatics when the Sox won, while his heart went down into his shoes when the clan of Carrigan met with reverses.

"I believe Joe Lannin did more than anybody else to save organized baseball back in the days of the Federal League invasion in the spring of 1914. He possessed the necessary money and determination to fight against every assault on the property rights of the two big leagues.

"Tris Speaker, a star with the Red Sox in the spring of 1914, was one of the plums sought by the Federal League agents. Speaker was on a tour of the world with the Giants and White Sox when the Federal League war opened.

"Agents of the outlaw organization cabled Tris an offer of $15,000 a year which in those days was tremendous money. Lannin cabled Speaker not to make any decision on the matter until after he had conferred with him in New York.

"Joe grabbed a train for New York and I breezed along to keep him company.

"As soon as Speaker arrived in New York, Lannin conferred with him. The Sox owner and the great outfielder walked up to me together.

"It wasn't necessary for Lannin to tell me Speaker had decided to remain in Boston. Later the Sox owner told me he had given Speaker a contract calling for $15,000.

"IT was necessary for Lannin to bid against the Federal League in order to keep Ray Collins and others of his players in the fold.

"I always felt that Lannin nursed a grievance against those players who had flirted with the outlaws. I believe that was the real reason he sold Speaker to Cleveland for $50,000.

"Joe Wood asked to be sold to Cleveland when Speaker was made manager of the club. Lannin refused to comply with Wood's request. Later Wood offered Lannin $7,500 for his release, but was turned down cold. 'It is Cleveland money,' Lannin told me at the time, 'and I won't satisfy Wood. He will remain idle or play for the Sox at my terms.' When Frazee got control of the Sox, Wood was able to go to Cleveland. Handsome Harry was never known to turn a deaf ear to the jingling of the money boxes.

"LANNIN had a big heart. He gave away thousands of baseball passes while other club owners cried out in protest. It was his system of doing something for his friends and also to advertise the national pastime.

"Among other things Lannin owned a flock of apartment houses in Forest Hills and Jamaica Plain. Most of his tenants got Red Sox passes with their rent receipts.

"The rookie ball player held a warm spot in Lannin's heart. I can picture him now sitting with Joe Judge, Everett Scott, and other recruits of the 1914 team, in the lobby of the Eastman Hotel in Hot Springs. He knew the youngsters were home sick and nervous and he tried to make them as happy as possible.

"Lannin sold the Red Sox on the advice of his doctors who figured the excitement of the game was too much for him.

"Next to baseball, Lannin's great hobby was checkers. He would play this game by the hour. There were few who could beat him.

"In recent years Lannin has given his attention to constructing golf courses, managing hotels and supervising Roosevelt Field. Now and then he has forgotten his doctors' orders long enough to watch a ball game.

"He has seen Ruth knock home runs. This must have thrilled him as it was Joe Lannin who paid Baltimore $10,000 for the Babe and developed him into a big league star."

Tom Kirby Tackles Tough Warrior in Larry Gaines

ROXBURY BATTLER IN SHAPE

Elusive Tom Has No Fear of Promoter Mack's New Sensation

Larry Gaines, heavyweight champion of all Canada, who has made a spectacular climb to the peak of the fistic pile, will clash with Tom Kirby of Roxbury, light heavyweight champion of New England, in one of the ten-round bouts of the Argonne A. A. at Braves Field next Monday night, replacing Jimmy Mendes of New Bedford, who was a victim of a knockout punch at the hands of Al Walker at the Whaling City last Monday night.

And with the original N. E. middleweight championship bout between Arthur Flynn of Lawrence and George "Wop" Manolian of Dorchester intact, Promoter Eddie Mack regards the present card as one of the greatest fistic attractions ever staged in this city.

Gaines forged his way to the front during the past four months and his rise has been [illegible]. From the ranks of the unknowns the Canadian champion sprang into immediate [illegible] fame by defeating by referee's decision Big Boy Peterson at Buffalo three weeks ago, Martin Burke, Mike McTigue, Bud Gorman, King Solomon, Jack Humbeck, Art Wiegand and Pat McCarthy. And all these victories were scored within four months.

Even Johnny Risko, one of the outstanding heavyweights of the country, flatly refused an offer of $15,000 to meet the Canadian king pin.

In accepting Gaines as an opponent, Kirby regards his chances brighter than ever now of climbing to the top by one victory, for he still expects to score a victory when he climbs into the Braves Field ring next Monday night.

Ernie Schaaf, the blond young giant from the United States Navy who promises to become the heavyweight champion of the world within a few years, is working like a beaver for his battle with Big Boy Peterson, champion of the Middle West, which will be staged in the Arena a week from Friday night.

In his professional career, Schaaf has lost exactly one decision. It was after he had defeated Benny Touchstone for the second time that he was matched to meet Fred Mays in Newark, for the heavyweight championship of New Jersey.

The local heavyweight will make another charge in the general direction of the heavyweight title a week from Friday, with Big Boy Peterson, Western giant, as his objective.

A "PAIR" THAT'S BETTER THAN FOUR ACES

THIS PAIR OF HANDS MAKES FANS FORGET EVERETT SCOTT

Such is the general opinion among baseball fans who have watched the remarkable showing by the Red Sox this year. The famous dukes belong to none other than Walter Gerber, who is just about "It" in that new Sox infield. His brilliant play in the short field and his ability to steady down the younger set has made the locals a far different proposition to contend with this year.

McGILL PICKED TO DEFEAT McLEOD

Pat McGill is training as never before for his finish match with George McLeod at the Grand Opera House tomorrow night. Pat sure wants another chance at Ed Lewis and his belt and is going to be right for this match.

Fans who like to pick the winners have put McGill as the favorite seeming to think that McLeod has shot his bolt and is doomed to be beaten on this occasion.

There is no weight or reach advantage. The men are as nearly equal physically as it is possible for two men to be. McGill will bank on his aeroplane whirl to win this bout. He made this hold famous in Boston last year. Pat was beaten here last year by Lewis, Malcewicz and Garkawienko only but later in Tulsa, Okla., he defeated Garkawienko.

McLeod has lost here only to Lewis and Malcewicz but these bouts were only hair-line decisions and many fans believe the leaping Scot can defeat either the Panther man or the Strangler.

The popular McLeod was the first man to introduce the flying head scissors to Boston mat fans. He made it as famous as McGill made his aeroplane whirl.

Just how these two holds will work out when applied to fast men is a good deal of a mystery. One thing is sure, it looks like a tough, hard grind for some one as both boys have shown in the past that they know wrestling and are able to go almost any distance.

The courage of both men has never been questioned and it looks like a case of which man can stand the gaff and pace the longest.

Stanley Stasiak will meet Leone Labriola in the semifinal bout. Labriola is substituting for Jack O'Dell, who has been called away to Canada. The other bouts on the card will be Charlie Hansen vs. Nich Gotch, and Jack Gansen vs. Bull Komar.

Fairway Wins Newmarket Stake

Newmarket, Eng., May 16 (AP)—Lord Derby's Fairway won the classic Newmarket Stakes over a mile and a quarter today.

Fairway is by Phalaris out of Scapa Flow.

The Duke of Portland's The Wheedler was second and Lord Lonsdal's Lodore was third. Thirteen ran.

Fairway, which is a favorite for the Derby, won by two lengths while there were three lengths between second and third. The stakes have a value of $5000 with extras.

The betting on Fairway was even, and on second and third 16 to 3 and 20 to 1 respectively.

Million and Half Gate Predicted—Tunney

By GENE TUNNEY
Heavyweight Champion of the World

TEX RICKARD has gone on record as predicting that the receipts for the bout between Tom Heeney and myself will reach the million and a half dollar mark.

Now, Tex isn't given to making wild statements, as we all know very well, and if that's his estimate, you can depend upon it that when the returns are checked over, they will be close to that figure.

I often wonder just what sort of a sixth sense Rickard was born with. And I imagine I'm not the only one who has, from time to time, marveled at the uncanny way he has of being able to see into the future.

When I josh Tex about this faculty he laughs and tries to say it's nothing more or less than a little sound business sense, gained from a lifetime of promoting big bouts.

But of course there's a lot more to it than that. If there wasn't, there would be more than one Tex Rickard, and the fact remains that he's the only one of his kind. There never has been another, and I doubt very much if there ever will be another in the years to come.

RICKARD is a great showman. If he had gone into the theatrical business, there's no doubt that he would have enjoyed the same success he's had in boxing. He might easily have become one of the leading producers in Hollywood, or a power in organized baseball.

Rickard is one of the few men in the world who knows what the people want, how they want it and, most important of all, when they want it. Coupled with that is his genius for organization which makes every event which he sponsors satisfying in every way to his patrons.

There wasn't much head or tail to boxing before Rickard stepped in and started promoting bouts by using sane business methods. Now his system is held up as a model for everyone else. Even in the smallest towns, at the smallest arenas, the promoters attempt to put over their shows by using characteristically Rickardian methods as far as possible.

THESE are just a few of the reasons why I think Tex will gather in that $1,500,000 gate. If he says he'll do a thing, he usually does it. He is accustomed to accomplishing the impossible and certainly no one familiar with boxing will say now that a million-and-a-half "gate" is impossible in these days.

And I'm glad, too, that I'm going to defend my title in my home town New York. I don't mean this as any reflection upon Philadelphia or Chicago, and I'm sure my friends in those cities won't take it as such.

What I do mean is that it's going to afford the chance to a lot of my New York friends, and to many youngsters, to see a championship event in which I'm one of the contestants.

Then, too, I think that I can't be blamed for wanting to appear in the city of my birth at least once while I'm the owner of the title. Surely, that's a natural desire.

I ALSO believe that the fans are going to see a great bout. Heeney is loaded for bear. With the incentive of all that glory dangling before his eyes he's certainly going to give everything that he's got, and I know the sort of feeling that comes over one when you step into the ring with the opportunity of winning a championship and all that goes with it.

Under such circumstances nearly any challenger would be at least dangerous. Heeney is more than dangerous. He is a man who has shown marked improvement in each succeeding engagement, and right now is at the very peak of his form.

Yes, it's going to be an interesting night—and perhaps you can see now why Tex is getting ready to crack another record!

Griff Plans to Keep Sisler

Washington, May 16 (AP)—Although waivers have been asked on George Sisler, utility first baseman of the Senators, indications are that he will draw his pay check from the Washington Club for some time to come.

No American League club claimed Sisler at the waiver price of $7,500 and Clark Griffith [illegible] the Senators said that the player would not be traded or released.

Griffith explained that waivers often are asked with a view to learning what [illegible] market for talent. He also said that the Chicago American League Club had made him an offer for Sisler and "Muddy" Ruel, catcher, but that he had not considered this proposal seriously.

NO PRIVILEGES FOR HAHN, SAYS OLYMPIC BODY

New York, May 16 (AP)—With Charlie Paddock's amateur status cleared by the announcement of the American Olympic committee, [illegible] followers today continued to wonder whether the "fastest human" would heed the advice of the committee to return to Los Angeles for the sectional Olympic tryouts. The sprinter had planned to remain in the East for both the sectional and the final trials.

While Paddock himself made no comment on the case, friends of the runner believed he would return to his home city. A sort of "century of the century" is planned between him and Charlie Borah, of the [illegible] Paddock's alma mater. This feature is counted upon to aid Los Angeles in raising its $10,000 Olympic quota.

Although the Olympic committee failed to [illegible] of the Paddock case announcement was made that the sprinter, at this time, "has a clean bill so far as this committee is concerned." The committee had discussed the runner's motion picture personal appearance tour, which is to close this week.

The A. A. U. is now considering the case. Observers pointed out that since Paddock is not yet a member of the Olympic team, the question of his amateur status really was in A. A. U. jurisdiction and not within that of the Olympic committee. [illegible] forced to forgo his plan to sail a month or more ahead of the team and enjoy that much additional training on the Olympic scene.

Word was heard in track circles today [illegible] Jack Ryder [illegible] changes in his [illegible] schedule.

MARRIED [illegible] different. [illegible] are supposed to have had their day and to have SETTLED down for life.

This is one of the reasons that make husbands seem really much more like CATS than bachelors, for cats are tamer than dogs, and also far more INDIFFERENT.

Another reason why a MARRIED [illegible] that he [illegible] But the [illegible] ONE life and that when he married it became HERS!

But future events usually prove that this is not always the case, for a man, as well as being a HUSBAND, may also be a son, a brother, a father, a PAL, a successful business man, a philosopher, a friend, and maybe a "sweet daddy," and where, oh where is the WOMAN who is GREAT enough successfully to live all his NINE lives with him? She does not yet EXIST!

A WIFE should be a fine combination of MOTHER [illegible] and SWEETHEART. She should be at times SMALL enough and helpless enough and WEAK enough to need to be taken CARE of. She should be BIG enough and WISE enough and STRONG enough to take care of the man in his weak moments, to CHEER him, guide him and sustain him in trouble or AFFLICTION. And she should be beautiful enough and GAY enough [illegible] to be a SWEETHEART to him when that is the side of him that clamors.

A woman who [illegible] these ROLLS to one man, is a true pal, and he will want no OTHER woman to play an important role in his life, if she gives him ALL this.

But even so, she cannot fill his WHOLE existence. Men need men as well as women. And both men and women need to have FRIENDS who are older than themselves, from whom they can LEARN; and [illegible] they should have people in [illegible] YOUNGER than themselves [illegible] in turn can [illegible] of INSPIRATION.

We [illegible] to GROW, and we [illegible] without EXERCISE. [illegible] IDEA of marriage is not to make over another person, but to enlarge your own PERSONALITY.

Men and women need each other in order to DEVELOP themselves. Association with a gentlewoman will [illegible] a STRONG, determined [illegible] TENDER. While a girl [illegible] warm and LOVING nature [illegible] into a STABLE and [illegible] woman, married to the RIGHT man.

And if a woman has a BIG man for a husband, with many interests, the BEST thing she can do is to add a few more ROLLS to her own repertoire. But they must be LEGITIMATE roles, if she wants HAPPINESS out of them.

A wife whose husband claims little of her TIME, attention or sympathy, can also be a mother, a DAUGHTER, a pal, a business or PROFESSIONAL woman, a FRIEND and a philosopher. She can in fact be anything but FAITHLESS, for if she is not true in one of her roles, all her other "LIVES will be undermined.

And the same is true of the HUSBAND!

Correct Manners Explained

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

If a lady calls on you whom you have never met, but who comes with a card from a friend of yours to introduce herself, and you were not at home, so she leaves the card in the mail-box with her name and address and also the name of the mutual friend who lives out of the city, what is the proper thing to do?

Is [illegible] to call on her, send her a note or call her on the telephone [illegible] that I was not at home when she called, or should I wait until she calls again?

MOLLY.

YOU should return your visitor's call in person, and if she is at home and you like her you can ask her to your house to luncheon or tea or dinner or just to pay an informal visit. If she is out when you return her call, you can write her a note and say that you are sorry to have missed her, or telephone her and say that you are sorry. A visiting card from a friend is a somewhat informal method of introduction and I do not believe that in this case you are called upon to do very much entertaining.

An Interesting Biological Fact

TRIPLETS occur only once in every 6200 births on an average, figures from four large New York maternity hospitals show. But twins surprised one set of parents out of every hundred.

WHY CUSTARD CURDLES.

Boiled custard curdles because the mixture is allowed to reach boiling point. The custard should be stirred over hot water until it thickens, but it must never be allowed to boil, or the eggs will immediately curdle.

Don't say "It Can't be done," until you've tried a Want Ad.

CARE OF BLANKETS.

Blankets should be given an airing in the garden occasionally on a sunny day. If they are kept clean and fresh in a dry cupboard with a lump of camphor or a few moth balls, the moth is not likely to trouble them. It is rare that moths attack blankets; they do not like the smell of them.

Adventure and Romance Amid Scenes of Almost Barbaric Splendor

CHAPTER 26.

NEXT to board us was Sinclair and we steamed towards Eninga where the blind king lived. Miss Hasken had a drawing pad on her knees and as we steamed by the villages she would make rapid sketches of the various places.

We travelled up the Angunie as long as we could see clearly and could make sure of the positions of the channells, and dropped anchor at old Injukis town the chief of the Okellys of Angunie.

The Chief came off accompanied by his head man and women and as Miss Hasken could speak Mpongue fairly well which language they understood the greatest curiosity they had ever seen, the White Lady, made their visit on board a great event.

They would ask her many questions about herself which she readily answered and this pleased them immensely and on parting she presented the dusky ladies with bon bons.

We made several short stops on our journey and arrived early in the morning at beautiful and picturesque Samba Falls.

Miss asken took great pleasure in visiting the natives and soon made friends with them. In her sketching visits to the various parts of this mountain town she was generally followed by an admiring throng of youngsters and women.

The witch doctors were very much disturbed as they often asked me what was the white lady doing. This I explained to them but I could see they were very dubious. Miss Hasken also made a short trip above the falls and told me that some day this would make a grand spot for a mission station but in reality it was such a stronghold of witchcraft that it was then about the most dangerous spot she could have thought of in Africa. She was, being the first white lady ever seen in that part of the country, always looked upon by us traders as a great female explorer as well as a heroine to trust herself into the heart of Isoga.

And the natives often spoke of her as their white sister and such she was, as being a perfect lady she treated them all with such human equality and respect that she completely won them over by her kindly actions and words.

She came from the city of Cincinnati, U. S. A., for the Benefit of these natives and I could see by her words and actions she would have given her life for their sakes. This was humanity indeed, and as this lady about twelve months after her visit to the Falls died of West Coast fever I had the honour of conveying her by sea and river to Barraca, the Chief Mission Station at Gaboon where she was buried with silent regrettes.

We could not have thought of a burial of a white lady at Kangue, as there is no doubt the Isoga worshippers would have stopped at nothing to get her remains for Fetish, but would be safely and undisturbed in her grave at Barraca.

On my return to Adoninango, with Sinclair, we found Count de Brazza was on his way.

Count de Barazza was a tall gentleman of what seemed middle age although not 30 and was a pensive man who never joked or smiled.

'We Fired a Rifle Salute As the Explorer Departed'

He wanted a gorilla which he intended to ship whole, which was to be preserved in good white spirits and as the natives always knew where these were, we made up a large puncheon.

The gorilla arrived and was an old man who had given notice of day dawn for many years by his fierce howlings and drummings. He was a fine big fellow, and it took six or seven large crew boys to get him into the puncheon. The alcohol was then poured on the large brute and the large barrel was closed. I heard afterwards that he arrived all safe in Europe.

And now this famous explorer made all ready for his trip, the large canoes were manned, the donkeys were last to be put on board. And as we fired him a rifle salute he waved us adieu and went off on his expedition.

This expedition was the means of adding a very large country to France.

Sinclair and I now argued the feasibility of following him up and establishing trading outposts in the best localities. This I agreed to do. I made several more trips to the sea and always contrived to meet Nina. She was more than willing to be carried off, by force if necessary, as the poor lass longed for freedom and had begun to realize her position. She had studied English in her spare time and could write fairly well, but I was careful to put nothing in them which might disagree with her captors, should any letter miscarry and fall into their hands. But she always told me to watch myself as the Black Encomi would take any chance to kill me, as they were determined to get even with me for opening the river up, and especially for the fight I had won, and although they might not dare to attack me openly to always beware.

If anything happened whilst I was away she would always let me know if possible

On a future occasion she told me of a spring which she used for bathing and was situate across the creek opposite where the Josh house was. But I must be careful not to let myself be seen. She generally took one of her maids with her, but could send her back for something whilst I could come there from the big river by a small path which would lead me to the spring, which was easily found by the grove of tall trees around it. After discussing many plans we agreed on this last one as best. She had a good head.

She would take over her clothes and hide them in the rushes near the big river. I was to drop a stone in the water from the bank into the creek where she would always watch when I was ready to steal her.

Furthermore I could call when I was ready for her and make my wish with plenty of liquor for the holy men And wear on that occasion a scarf round my neck and drop a piece of string on the floor with a knot in it. At the time I smiled and thought surely the tricks of a woman are wonderful.

'Any Fumbling Meant Death For Each of Us'

Furthermore she told me she would slowly shut one eye, and at this I smiled, but I told her I thought this was a sensible way of getting clear. Yes she said and after that I shall come away from the Enago (house) just as I am dressed, as it must all be done quickly to make all sure.

I shall dive in the water without sound and shall climb to the bank near the Icondu tree (great cotton tree). Then as I can run fast you will pull for the middle of the stream. The darkness and speed will help us.

The poor Godess was really in great earnest and of course any fumbling meant her death if not mine also. I had well understood.

As future events will show she was quite right, and as things worked out well on that memorable night, the night I stole her, I always gave her credit for having a better head than I had, as all the plans I could think of were a swift attack on the Holy Men during a visit and carry her off old Scotch boarder fashion or young Loc' Invar in a boat whilst the fathers were drunk.

And I found her plan work out so plainly that Nina must have seen lots more happenings round the Josh house than what she liked me to know. Anyway she had saved my life by her timely warnings and I was determined on taking her away from that ungodly surroundings.

Strange to say, although, I liked Nina and it would not have taken much to have balanced my loving in her favour then, I could never keep my head about a little blue-eyed lass I had known up in North Lancashire.

She would always crop up in my mind when I was admiring Nina who never seemed to notice there was something, ah, a Lancashire fairie between so there it was.

I wrote to little Peru of course and explained how Nina herself had planned the getaway, and do you know to my great surprise in his next letter he declared he was going to be in at the stealing with me, and as he was shortly coming of age, he was going to see me out of that God-forsaken land the West Coast.

Money he said was no object. I must come and sojourn with him where he would build a place in healthy and romantic Peru, where we could love and enjoy life as it should be, with by Godess of high degree, and where they would both admire my wife and my ruby.

I could only laugh heartily, as I knew his nature so well, British and Inca it was just as I expected. But I wondered if I should tell of my fairy but I never did. In fact he admired my sketch of Nina which he declared was A 1. Somehow I felt that if he once saw my Belle Sauvage he would succum, heart silver mines and all. And Nina had such simple winning ways I thought it would be wise to warn him but I didn't, anyway come eventually he did but not before I advised him, and whether he succumbed or not we shall see later on in the story.

(Here Trade Horn pauses to lament over the colonising opportunities lost to Great Britain in Africa.)

"Aye, when I saw de Brazza's canoes disappearing to make new country for the French . . . And the singing came back to us.

"Commissioned by his country to [illegible] done it for England a dozen times and over.

"If I'd been Sinclair I'd have owned the country. In Britain's name, of course.

"I've collected curios for a good many people in my time. Speaking of gorillas in spirits there was that feller I packed for President Grant when he came to the West Coast. He was naturally looking for souvenirs and I sold him a gorilla for thirty pounds. I put him in a puncheon of spirits same as the big chap de Brazza sent to his medical society. Aye. But by some misfortune the wrong puncheon got put aboard the Alaska. I'd had a poor feller, a goldsmith from Accra, sleeping his last sleep in a vat of spirits in my store-shed, and only waiting for a ship to take him home to his own people.

"Aye, I labelled him 'Accra' and I'd already written to the British consul at Accra to look out for him. But after the Alaska had sailed I found they'd put the wrong one on board. So he went to America as a gorilla.

"No, I never heard any complaints. I meant to write but—'twould 'a' been a long business. And I was a gorilla to the good. I was doing a lot with the museums just then."

Disturbers of the Past—and Present!

DRAWN BY

Dorothy Flack

"DISTURBERS of the Peace!" The phrase isn't a new one, oh, no! It's been in existence for centuries. Ever since Mother Eve started Father Adam's thoughts straying toward the forbidden fruit the disturbers have been working their enchanting way down the centuries.

Delilah, Cleopatra, Helen of Troy, the Du Barry—all of them disturbers! Lovely disturbers!

Prim little Miss Puritan, coy Colonial Lady, dashing Miss Gibson Girl—every one of them disturbers!

Styles have changed, languages have changed, modes and manners have changed—but people—well, they have but adapted themselves to the changing times. Dispositions never change! Therefore it is that each century, each era, has its disturbers. Lovely while they last, but each lovelier than the last, so you must agree with me that truly "there's nothing new under the sun." Vamping was as old in Cleopatra's day as it is in ours, and I'll bet you that if the lovely Egyptian queen was suddenly to be placed in the midst of a crowd of our modern girls they'd stare each other out of countenance for a while, and then they'd find some way of making themselves understood, and they'd find that they were all using the same methods of disturbing. There's no old and new when it comes to that. It's ever and ever the same. So, Past, Present or Future, you'll find them—disturbers. Lovely ones, devastating ones, and you'll love them and hate them and—that's what makes history!

"Little Sins"; Alan's Tender Heart Proves to Be All for Miss Gay

chiffon, and tendrils of her yellow hair curled up by the breeze on the sides of her tight black turban; and unpremeditatedly he had begun to voice the things that burned in his mind.

She had cut him off with a little scream: "Watch the road, Alan!"

A minute afterwards, when he had dodged the telegraph pole responsible for her fright, she murmured, "Sorry to interrupt, darling. But death is so permanent!" She lit a cigarette for herself and one for him with the dashboard lighter, and added, settling back, "Besides, it's just as well. I love to be made love to, but not at high noon on a state road. Save it till we get to the shore, Alan. Then I'll listen. Starlight, and the sound of surf—oh, then I'll lap it up!"

He had not enjoyed her flippancy; had been somewhat wounded by it. But he soothed himself with the reflection that flippancy was ever Gay's "line," that it didn't mean anything in particular, and that she had the right idea anyhow. Starlight and the sound of surf . . .

From the spot where he stood now, fumbling with his tie, he could by the mere half turn of his head catch a glimpse of the ocean. A step to the window, and he could see acres and acres of ruffled turquoise blue, stretching to a horizon where sailed a pigmy ship with funnels like three cigarette stubs smoking. He could close his eyes and still smell the salt of the ocean, feel the cool, hear the dull drone of its depth and the spanking splash of its shallowness on the sand.

Surf. And there would be starlight soon.

Alan untied his tie and tied it again. He thought over all that he would say to Gay when there was starlight, and how he would say it. He held a little rehearsal . . . until his sense of humor rescued him and his whisperings died in a snort.

"Alan," suggested Alan, "shut your mouth."

He took two strides away from the mirror, then wheeled and added ferociously, 'Or I'll sock it!'

"Who's this you're gonna sock?" called Pierce through the open bathroom doorway.

"[illegible] not far from here," said Alan amiably.

Gay's room was the best in the house. Inevitably. She was the sort of person to whom the best rooms, the best theater seats, the most advantageous restaurant tables, always are given. Hers was the cream of life by natural prerogative; she accepted it calmly, as if life were nothing but cream.

She shared the room with Jane McClure, her closest girl friend—except for Irene, almost her sole girl friend. As a rule women over 60 and under 10 were the only ones who could make themselves care for Gay. Irene was an exception because she had an almost masculine type of mind; she appreciated beauty as a man does, and was neither jealous of it nor afraid of it.

Jane was an exception because she was shrewd. She had long ago decided that to be Gay's intimate was safer than to be Gay's foe. She was nearly as pretty as Gay and equally popular, and she played in the same playground; hence it had had to be either one thing or the other.

They kept each other's secrets and [illegible] each others [illegible] and got along very nicely. There had been, to be sure, a few regrettable episodes—notably the episode of the bland young Englishman, discovered by Jane only to [illegible] (after which they "didn't speak" for months). But usually their relations were of the most amicable; and they missed each other badly when they were not. Unbelievable though it may seem, exceedingly gorgeous young ladies are often lonesome, especially prior to five in the afternoon.

Jane was very dark, with long hair [illegible] around her sleek small head, and eyes of [illegible]. She used no rouge, but bore down heavily with a lipstick, so that her mouth resembled a poppy [illegible] snow. Vivacity was Item One of her credo. She held that a girl was a kind of glorified clown in the circus of the universe, whose mission was to entertain. Accordingly, she entertained, and only Gay and a few others were aware that this exuberance of spirits was not a part of [illegible] wore like a child's toy drum.

She was utterly without it now. She achieved her evening toilet in gestures incomparably limp and lackadaisical, appearing throughout the process to be on the verge of a complete collapse. Once, semi-clothed, she flung herself flat on the day bed and lay there, her hands hanging like dead hands over the sides. "Nothing," she said in answer to Gay's solicitous inquiry. "Just recharging batteries, that's all."

The room was balmy with the scent of sachet and of perfume and [illegible] just, gift of Windy Grant to Jane, waiting in a [illegible] things and chiffon things—all the gossamer armor of these warriors of the heart—lay strewn around. The dinner gown straight from the Rue de la Paix with which Gay would shortly adorn herself spilled a green-and-silver water[illegible] foot of a bed. And Gay in a skimpy silver slip sat on the bed's edge, pulling stockings like breaths of mist well over her knees and [illegible] with wreaths of satin rosebuds.

"You'd better get moving," she advised. "I hear people starting down already."

"That isn't people," Jane [illegible] drowsily. "That's Helen Havemeyer, who's heard that the early bird catches the worm."

"Worms are men?"

"Men," corrected Jane, "are worms."

She rose a moment later and, sighing, stumbled over to the dressing-table. She began to brush her hair in long clinging strokes. Gay thought, watching her, "I believe I'll let mine grow this fall." This was the unfailing reaction of all bobbed heads to a display of Jane's abundant tresses.

"Tell me some more," directed Jane.

"I've told you everything I can think of."

Nobile Tells of Speeding Over Arctic Wastes Toward Pole

thing was ready for an immediate start.

The chaplain of the Citta de Milano, Father Gianfranchi, offered prayers. We all listened standing at attention bareheaded. Then the airship was blessed by the priest while Commander Romagna of the Citta de Milano smashed a valedictory bottle over the ballast hanging from the prow of the Italia.

Before entering the gondola I embraced my brother, Amedo, who is an officer on the Citta de Milano, and shook hands with all my devoted collaborators. A large crowd had gathered in the deep snow to see us off, including the crew of the Citta de Milano and a number of the people who have been flocking to Kings Bay to see the Italia.

A great friendly shout echoed with my own voice as I gave the order to go. In a few minutes we were far away but the voices of the crowd, which now had melted down to a black smear on the immense snowfield, reached our ears across the clear, frosty air.

Those were great moments. We have been sailing steadily since 4 o'clock, 500 feet beneath a thick bank of fog which seems to extend for many miles over our heads. So far this fog is the only disturbing element and I am very hopeful.

We started our flight at 1:20 p. m. The weather is fine.

At 6 this morning, we were expecting to start at any moment. The nightmare of Sunday night lifted definitely during yesterday. The snowfall ceased at dawn, and by noon the sky had returned to its purest azure. A tepid, luminous sun rapidly melted the snow accumulated on the airship.

I immediately ordered that the Italia be refueled and that all necessary material be taken aboard again. The order was given at 2 p. m., but the secret was well kept until this morning, as a sudden change for the worse was still possible.

It was 5 o'clock this morning by the time we gathered at the hangar and took our stations aboard. The transport of the gasoline containers and supplies as well as the adjustment of our ballast had kept the whole crew, assisted by the men from the Citta Di Milano, hard at it until midnight. The work was delayed by the distance to be covered afoot between the supply ship and the Italia—at least half an hour of hard going in deep, melting snow.

I have not yet abandoned the project of a dash over Nicholas II Land, but, owing to the uncertainty of the weather conditions, this cannot be decided in advance. Neither is it possible to pre-arrange a definite itinerary. Our real steersman will be the weather. For during a flight lasting three days, who can tell what vagaries of wind, fog and snow we may not have to contend with?

Visibility is, of course, an essential condition for the accomplishment of scientific observations such as I have arranged should be made. Everything has been done to assure the complete success of this first and, perhaps most difficult part of the expedition.

At any rate, the Italia has just escaped being crushed to death by snow within its hangar. The escape was affected, thanks to the wonderful good will of all concerned and the magnificent discipline of the crew.

The object of the flight we are undertaking will be to ascertain whether there exists any lands to the north of Nicholas II Land. The western coast of this latter also will be explored and described as thoroughly as possible.

Finally, we hope to solve the problem of Gillis Land, the phantom-like territory the existence of which is very doubtful. If successful, this journey should give a very valuable contribution to geography and science generally.

It was a perfect morning, without a breath of wind. The temperature of ten degrees centigrade below freezing allowed us to place a larger load of reserve fuel aboard the dirigible. The ship appeared very buoyant as it strained at its moorings.

A portable radio transmitter with a light aerial was placed in a gondola ready for use in case of a forced landing on the ice. Ordinary snowshoes will be used in place of the Canadian type, which is not sufficiently resistant for our purposes. Half a dozen sleds and several sets of skis also are stored aboard. Even a complete set of fishing tackle is available, for I have endeavored to guard against all possible possibilities.

While we were working, dull explosions of dynamite marked the slow progress of the supply ship blasting its way toward land. The Citta Di Milano has been blockaded in the ice since its arrival here, but the barrier was being broken slowly and surely by sheer force.

By Saturday at the latest, the Citta Di Milano should reach its final moorings.

Reed Tells Why the Doctor Asks About Your Habits

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D.,
Former President of the American Medical Association

WHEN your doctor takes down your history—and all modern doctors take down histories and keep them—he will ask you something about your personal habits. It is at this point more than any other where he is liable to fail in doing his whole duty. He has a natural disinclination to pry into the very privacies of your life. This sense of delicacy on his part may result in fialure to elicit some very essential facts. It is really very much better for him to affect the air of professional nonchalance and go after the brutal truth.

"Do you drink alcohol?"

"Oh yes—just a social glass now and then."

"Precisely what do you mean by that?"

"Oh, maybe a cocktail before dinner, a little wine with my meals—something like that."

"What I wish to know is, how much alcohol do you take, how often do you take it and how long have you had the habit of taking it? These facts are important for my purpose."

"Oh, I see! Why, doctor, sometimes I don't take a drink for three months—sometimes not for six months."

"Well, what happens then?"

"Ah, doctor, I guess you, at last, have put me in the corner. As a matter of fact, at such times, I am very liable to and generally do get [illegible]."

The doctor had at last elicited the useful and necessary information which enabled him to understand the important features of the case before him.

We are all more or less not merely the creatures but the slaves of habit which we ourselves have developed. In this way, humanity is constantly forging the chains by which its usefulness and happiness are manacled.

And it is not merely a matter of alcohol which, while important, represents the least important of our habits.

Among the habits that are most baffling to the physician is the addiction to certain drugs. In these latter days, in response to the inherent demand of the system for stimulation, there has been a great increase in the consumption of habit-forming drugs such as cocaine, morphine, opium—but especially heroin.

This last named drug is made from coal tar and exercises a powerful and destructive influence on the jelly-like tissue of the brain and nervous system, known as protoplasm. Only a few does of heroin are required to effect the destruction and thereby to lay a permanent foundation for the heroin habit.

Young, Beautiful Skin Easy to Have

To know you can possess a young beautiful face, at any age, with skin that fairly sparkles is indeed comforting. Get an ounce of pure mercolized wax at any drug store and use as directed. It gently peels away the outer skin, removing all such blemishes as pimples, freckles and moth patches. The new skin, now exposed, is clear, soft, smooth, girlishly youthful and face looks years younger. Mercolized wax brings out the hidden beauty. To quickly remove wrinkles and other age lines, use as face lotion 1 ounce powdered saxolite and 1 half [illegible] hazel.

THE PLAY

Trick 2. With protection in Diamonds gone, Declarer faces the necessity of making sufficient tricks in a hurry before losing the lead. Even though the Spades break, he will still be one trick short of game, so in Clubs he sees his only hope, however slim the chances appear.

Tricks 3 and 4. The Queen of Clubs falling, Dummy's 10 blocks the suit.

Trick 5. Had Declarer tried out the Spade suit before playing Clubs, Dummy's remaining Clubs would here be shut out for lack of entry, and game as well as contract would have been lost.

Here's Your Chance to Help a Good Work

(Editorial)

The National Vaudeville Association is appealing to the public for funds. The money will be used to send vaudeville artists to sanitariums, and in some cases to bury them. There are many pitiful cases, like the above. Wouldn't you gladly help to send them to a sanitarium? Although the committee does not say so, an attempt will be made to let donators decide which artists shall be buried.

Molly O'Day for Lead

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
(Copyright, 1928, by Universal Service.)

LOS ANGELES, May 16.—The flapper with a slim silhouette who lives on a lettuce leaf and a piece of pineapple is due for a shock. David Wark Griffith is helping along the cause of the plump girl by considering Molly O'Day for the feminine lead in "The Pioneer Woman."

I think it's the laugh of the year. D. W., who pioneers endless film innovations, is about to throw modern traditions to the winds and cast in the leading role the girl First National executives decreed was too fat. Molly has been in Hot Springs, Arkansas, trying to rid herself of extra poundage and crying her heart out because of the gossip that she had eaten herself out of a job.

D. W., I hear it whispered, is entirely sold on the O'Day idea. He is greatly impressed with Molly's sister, Sally O'Neil, who does some real acting in his "Battle of the Sexes." And if it can be arranged, plumpness notwithstanding, he will sign Molly within a week or so.

Can it be that D. W. is going to give the plump girls a break by making them fashionable?

THERE are many jobs handed out in Hollywood, but few of them are ever received with the appreciation that Pauline Garon expresses. Pauline has been signed to play the other girl in "Me, Gangster," and she is beginning to believe in Santa Claus and good fairies. The part is a good one and one that is worthy of little Miss Garon's best efforts.

Polly, by the way, when told that it was rumored that Lowell Sherman might marry Ann Rork, said, "Well, if he makes Ann as happy as he made me she will be very happy." Which wasn't a bad remark coming from the divorced wife. It's all the style in Hollywood now for divorced husbands and wives to be friendly.

* * *

WHAT is happening in Hollywood? Just a moment while I put on my thinking cap. Bianche Mehaffey starts "Silks and Saddles" at Universal, opposite Hoot Gibson. I'll bet it's more saddles than silks if it's a Gibson picture. Henry McRae will direct it. Irving Thalberg and Norma Shearer reached town yesterday. Both of them looking mighty fit after their trip abroad.

Norma starts "Ballyhoo" with Sam Woods as soon as she gets her breath.

Remember "Alias Jimmy Valentine," made famous by H. B. Warner on the stage and later in a movie? Well, William Haines is going to play "Jimmy" with Eddie Sedgwick directing. I am glad of it because it's something different from the smart alec pictures Bill has been doing.

THE diminutive Ann Pennington who is as big as a pint cup has enough determination for a girl eight times her size. Ann has a terrible yen for California and always has had. Her season with the "George White Scandals" is over so she has gone out and gotten herself a nice little movie job.

She plays an important part with Sam Sax in "Companionate Marriage." I had lunch with Ann Saturday and she signed papers shortly afterward, proving these movie contracts can be closed in a hurry.

TRAVEL notes in Hollywood: Joseph Schenck plans to leave Hollywood July 1 for a trip to Europe. Just a holiday, he says, and a rest from picture-making. Greta Nissen has packed her suitcase and is leaving for the big town preparatory to a trip across the water. Marie Prevost has no intentions of remaining in New York once she gets there. Her next stopping place is also Europe.

Dolores Del Rio will make her next picture abroad. Hollywood, quick to anticipate rumors, suggests it may be a honeymoon trip of Miss Del Rio and Edwin Carewe, her director. Yet both of them stoutly deny there is any thought of marriage and without marriage there can be no honeymoon. Am I right?

MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE

By HELEN ROWLAND.

WHEN a man marries the wrong woman, it is usually in a weak moment—when spring is dancing in his veins or the moonlight has gotten into his eyes or something has weakened his morale.

* *

But when a woman marries the wrong MAN, it is always in a DESPERATE moment. She knows exactly what she is doing and why she is doing it.

* * *

In nearly every woman's life there are certain "desperate moments," when she has to watch her step to keep from skidding into a foolish marriage.

* * *

There is, for instance, that bitter moment when a girl realizes that she is not going to get the man that she thinks she really loves and wants; when she faces the fac tthat his selfishness or his ambition or some other woman makes him unattainable, and when she is sorely tempted to accept the first man who comes along, just as a "consolation prize!"

* * *

And then there is that dangerous moment in the late twenties, when she has waited overtime for Prince Charming to come riding by and is tired of "holding the bride's bouquet" at weddings, and foolishly tempted to close her eyes and say "yes" to the devoted old Dobbin who has been vainly begging her to marry him.

* * *

Or, again, there is that tragic moment after a glorified love affair, when she finds herself lightly and carelessly thrown over by some gay philanderer, at whose feet she has been casting pearls; and when she desperately wraps her vanity around her and rebounds into the arms of some innocent suitor, whose middle name she scarcely knows, and the color of whose eyes she has never noticed.

And there is that foolish moment, after a hard day at the office, when she has had a scrap with the manager, and her nerves are stretched to the snapping point, and she feels that she can't stand the daily grind another instant! That moment, when the lure of a home of her own and a delft-blue kitchenette and the time to go window shopping tempts her to snk into the arms of the stodgy, middle-aged boy friend with the kind heart and the triple chin!

* * *

And, lastly, there is that moment which comes so often at the height of a woman's business or professional career, when she ha sa prescient flash of the day not far off when her friends and her teeth and her illusions will be fading away and she will find herself lonely in the midst of all her achievement. This is the insidious moment when an otherwise sane woman calls down the laughter of the gods by eloping with a baby boy half her age, who will soon begin to look upon her kisses as an income tax!

* * *

These are woman's "desperate moments," whe nshe ought to beg to be put in a straitjacket to prevent her frmo wrecking her own life and that of some innocent bystander. Because it takes about all the love you can hold to weather marriage successfully; and it's not fair to short change yourself or the other fellow!

CAPITALIZATION

After completion of the presently contemplated financing the capitalization of Old Colony Trust Associates will be as follows:

	Presently authorized	To be outstanding
First Series Trust Shares, no par value	400,000 shares	400,000 shares

Old Colony Corporation has agreed to buy for $50 cash per share 10% of this issue of First Series Trust Shares as sold. This will give Old Colony Corporation, upon completion of this financing, an investment of $2,000,000 in Old Colony Trust Associates. Of the 400,000 First Series Trust Shares, 150,000 shares are to be offered for subscription to shareholders of Old Colony Trust Company.

ORGANIZATION: Old Colony Trust Associates is a Massachusetts trust organized primarily for the purpose of purchasing for possible future increment, bonds, notes and other obligations of corporations, business organizations, Governments and political subdivisions thereof, domestic and foreign, and preferred, common and capital shares of banks, insurance companies, and other corporations and business organizations, domestic and foreign. Holders of obligations and shares of Old Colony Trust Associates are bound by the provisions of the Declaration of Trust under which it was organized.

TRUSTEES' POWERS: Title to the Trust property is vested in the Trustees, and they have absolute discretion in controlling and managing the same. They may invest and reinvest the Trust property in their uncontrolled discretion and in so doing may exercise the utmost freedom in choice of investments. Neither the Trustees nor the shareholders are personally liable for obligations of the Trust. Holders of such obligations must look only to the Trust property for the satisfaction of their claims.

No transaction shall be deemed improper because of its speculative character, or because a greater proportion of the Trust property is invested therein than is usual for trustees or by reason of any interest, direct or indirect, which any Trustee or any shareholder or Old Colony Trust Company or Old Colony Corporation or any subsidiary thereof or interest affiliated therewith, either individually or in any representative or fiduciary capacity, may have therein, or by reason of any profit or commission which they or any of them may make therefrom.

TRUSTEES

The Declaration of Trust—reference to which is hereby made—is filed with and may be seen upon application at the office of Old Colony Trust Company, Depositary. It provides for not less than ten nor more than thirty-five Trustees. Succeeding and additional Trustees are to be selected by the Trustees serving at the time of selection, but are subject to the approval of the Executive Committee, of Old Colony Trust Company. The following are the present Trustees:

Gordon Abbott, Chairman of the Board of Directors, Old Colony Trust Company, and Director, Chicago and North Western Railway Company.

Charles Francis Adams, Director, Old Colony Trust Company, Treasurer, Harvard University, and Director, Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston.

John E. Aldred, Director, Old Colony Trust Company, Chairman, Consolidated Gas, Electric Light and Power Company of Baltimore, and Chairman, Gillette Safety Razor Company.

T. Jefferson Coolidge, Vice-President, Old Colony Trust Company, and Member of the Executive Committee, Boston and Maine Railroad.

F. Winchester Denio, Vice-President, Old Colony Trust Company, and Director, Old Colony Corporation.

Philip Dexter, Director, Old Colony Trust Company, Trustee, Amoskeag Manufacturing Company, and Vice-President and Trustee, Provident Institution for Savings.

Frederic C. Dumaine, Director, Old Colony Trust Company, Treasurer, Amoskeag Manufacturing Company, and President, Waltham Watch Company.

Benjamin W. Guernsey, Vice-President, Old Colony Corporation, and Director, Wellesley National Bank.

Francis R. Hart, Vice-Chairman of the Board of Directors, Old Colony Trust Company, and Member of the Executive Committee, United Fruit Company.

Robert F. Herrick, Director, Old Colony Trust Company, President, Pacific Mills, and Member of the Executive Committee, United Shoe Machinery Corporation.

Edwin R. Marshall, President, Old Colony Corporation, and Vice-President, Old Colony Trust Company.

Philip Stockton, President, Old Colony Trust Company, and Director, General Electric Company.

TERMS OF TRUST: The Trustees have entered into a contract with Old Colony Corporation by which the latter will serve the Trustees in an advisory capacity and otherwise, and in addition thereto will act as agent of the Trustees in keeping proper books of account and doing the other clerical work incidental to carrying on the business of the Trust. The fee to be paid to Old Colony Corporation for such services will be 6% of the annual net income of the Trust plus the expenses and disbursements of Old Colony Corporation incurred and made in connection with such services.

Old Colony Trust Company and Old Colony Corporation and any subsidiary thereof or interest affiliated therewith and any Trustee may buy from the Trust and sell to others any shares, obligations or property of the Trust in all respects as if no fiduciary relation existed and no such transaction shall be considered improper whether or not any profit or commission is received.

TAX FEATURES: The Trustees will file with the Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation their agreement to pay annually such taxes to the Commonwealth as under the present Massachusetts statutes will render dividends received from the Trust by Massachusetts shareholders exempt from Massachusetts income taxation.

AUDIT: The books and accounts of Old Colony Trust Associates will be audited annually by public accountants.

These First Series Trust Shares are offered subject to allotment at our discretion. Legal matters in connection with the creation of the Trust and this issue of First Series Trust Shares have been approved by Messrs. Pillsbury, Dana and Young, of Boston.

CANDY MAKERS AID HEALTH CAMPAIGN

that in my addresses to the Martha Lee Women's Club and kitchen, I have urged that each member constitute herself a critic of the food market. All were asked to pay special attention to the manner of handling food, as observed by them in their daily marketing, and to bring notice of probable violations to the attention of the director.

A campaign such as the one under way, with its corps of volunteer assistants, is bound to have a tremendous influence in bettering the present day modes of food merchandising. Best of all, it is to be profitable to the dealer as well as to the customer.

Many a merchant in the past may lay his failure to make good in his chosen business to the fact that he did not know or failed to observe a higher sanitary standard. Appetizing, wholesome merchandise that is prepared, handled and sold under clean sanitary conditions is the aim of the Health Laboratory.

Cleanliness of person and premises is rarely an item of money outlay. The old recipe of "soap and water with plenty of elbow grease" is a real necessity and scarcely a hardship.

To the honest but careless dealer, who yet had the proper intention and rightful frame of mind, we offer the hand of co-operation. No mercy will be shown to the improper practices indulged in by the unscrupulous dealer in unwholesome and adulterated foodstuffs.

AMERICAN TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH COMPANY

155th Dividend

THE regular quarterly dividend of Two Dollars and Twenty-Five Cents ($2.25) per share will be paid on Monday, July 16, 1928, to stockholders of record at the close of business on June 20, 1928.

MARKET HIT BY SELLING WAVE

New York, May 16 (AP)—A sensational advance in prices on the New York Stock Exchange, led by the airplane issues, was checked late today by a general selling movement believed to be based on fears that speculation was being carried to excess.

Wright Aeronautical, after soaring $30 a share to a new high record at $244, broke to $230; and Curtiss fell from $191, which represented an extreme gain of $22, to $161.

Early gains of $2 to $10 a share in other speculative issues were cut down, and in a few cases converted into net declines of $4 to $13 a share.

FORD Motor Company of Canada reports for year ended December 31 net profits of $171,222 after charges, federal taxes, against $5,341,177 in 1926.

AMERICAN Telephone rights opened on tape at 10 and rose to 14½.

MERGENTHALER Linotype Co. declared usual 25 cents extra.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S PLATFORM FOR BOSTON AND NEW ENGLAND

For BOSTON:
1—Clean streets.
2—Solution of traffic and parking problems.
3—Better pay for honest public service.
4—An airport SECOND TO NONE.
5—Erection of a MUNICIPAL AUDITORIUM to compare with any in the land, in order that Boston, properly supplied with first-class hotels, may be the premier convention city of the U. S. A.

For NEW ENGLAND:
1—Weld the six States into a unit through the activities of the New England Council, thus creating a community consciousness.
2—Promote intercourse with Central and South America, encouraging New Englanders to "turn to the sea" again.
3—Keeping everlastingly at the job of telling the rest of the country all about our unique advantages as Summer and Winter Playground of the Nation.
4—Foster the prosperity of our industries through (1) greater efficiency in production and (2) the use of modern methods in merchandising.
5—Promote in every way such natural resources as forests, water powers and fisheries.
6—Assist New England agriculture to better marketing methods.

Grafting Policemen

Prohibition "Made to Order" for Them

Eight of the men who composed the "Cape Cod rum ring," as the news columns have told us, are to be sentenced next Monday.

There is a former chief of police among them, which is not uncommon, and a former prohibition agent, also not unusual.

They operated in and out of HYANNIS, distributing center for Summer resorts and educational center of the Cape. There was testimony that smuggled and hi-jacked liquor was "split" and rebottled in the basement of the chief's home. There were counterfeited labels, to suit the taste of the customer.

Only a few weeks ago, the energetic District Attorney of Middlesex was prosecuting certain well-known citizens of GROTON, seat of what has been called the "most aristocratic" school in the country.

There was a former chief of police in that crowd, too, as well as a member of the Board of Selectmen.

Up in Nashua, New Hampshire, in December, they arrested the then chief of police of NEWPORT, VT., for "transporting." His automobile was loaded down with the choicest, fresh from over the border. He resigned and within a month or two was picked up again, on a similar errand.

And so it goes, so we are reminded, week after week and month after month, of our great national blunder.

Is anyone surprised? Does the prohibitionist begin to realize that he is the only effective friend the liquor traffic has left?

Probably not. Mr. Prohibitionist appears to prefer the word to the fact, the shadow to the substance. He succeeded a little more than eight years ago in getting the WORD into the Constitution. It is never to come out again if HE can prevent it.

The "enforcement"—please don't laugh—the "enforcement" of this law up to this time has cost the United States more than $170,000,000. This is what we have SPENT for "enforcement." In revenue we are losing $300,000,000 ANNUALLY.

And all for what?

All for the purpose of discovering, or rediscovering, facts which were known to the Massachusetts of FIFTY YEARS AGO.

It was in the year 1875 that Governor William Gaston, in his inaugural message, advocated the repeal of the State prohibitory law.

In that year the Legislature repealed it, substituting local option.

Read, please, with Groton and Hyannis and Newport, Vt., in mind—not to mention other places, for the present—what Governor Gaston of Massachusetts said FIFTY-THREE YEARS AGO to the Legislature:

"Experience has shown that it is a fatal mistake to rely upon law as the sole or principal agency in promoting the cause of temperance. . . . Many will resist force who will yield to persuasion. I fear the tendency of late has been to rely too much upon the strength of the law, and too little upon more potent instrumentalities. . . .

"More than twenty years ago the law known as the prohibitory law was enacted. With the exception of a single year that law, or a law of similar character, has been on the statute book. It has had behind it a strong moral support in the high character of many of its advocates. These advocates have given to it the strength which always comes from intelligence and virtue. . . .

"In addition to all these, the great power of the State was behind it. An extraordinary police force was created, mainly to assist in its enforcement. Never in this Commonwealth did a law have more potent and unusual agencies to give its strength and power; but these agencies have served only to demonstrate its weakness, and make its failure the more conspicuous.

"I am opposed to this law because of this failure and because I believe that its execution, or what has been called its execution, has tended to corrupt the administration of law in the State. . . .

"The appointing power has always sought for honest and worthy men to enforce it, and has undoubtedly obtained many worthy men for that purpose; but it is believed (whether correctly or not you must judge) that the temptations to corruption which the law presents have proved too strong for many of the subordinate officers who have been charged with its execution; so that (at least in many parts of the State) it has practically degenerated from a prohibitory law of the most stringent form to a license law of the most corrupt character. When the terrors of the law are used for the purposes of private gain and political influence the cause of morals is not advancing."

True in 1875, true in 1928, as no one need turn to the "graft" trials to learn for himself.

What shall be DONE about it?

Presently? Nothing—perhaps and MOST likely.

But when in the not too distant future the great non-drinking and sane majority of Americans see the Eighteenth Amendment to have been our great blunder, we may be sure they will accomplish such a reform as was achieved by Massachusetts in 1875, under the wise leadership of WILLIAM GASTON.

Part Tiger, Part Lion

Such Combinations Are, Fortunately, Few

In these three pictures are useful lessons, good reasons to compliment Mother Nature on her wisdom in keeping various kinds of animals distinct.

The top pictures show a tiger and a lioness, now in the London Zoological Gardens.

Below you see the offspring of these two animals, called a "tigon," a name made up of "tiger" and "lion."

In the tigon is something of the lion, something of the tiger. You find it hard to tell where one begins and the other ends.

We know that violent contrasts in parents are dangerous. Asiatics and Europeans, for instance, according to those that should know, rarely produce the best results, at least in the first two or three generations.

The mule, half horse and half ass, is a tricky creature.

MAIN QUESTION IS, IS IT SENSIBLE?

By DR. FRANK CRANE

WHAT is the difference where the proposition comes from! It may come from a bootblack, a prime minister, a most learned professor, or a lunatic.

The main question is, is it sensible?

There is probably no other thing wanted by so many people in this world today as that we shall have no more war. Curiously enough, the efforts are going on in every country to prepare for war, and at the same time probably nine-tenths of the population of every country loathe and despise war.

The effect of the last war was to impress upon the world the filth, horror, stupidity and uselessness of an armed conflict.

The day has gone when some big bully nation can start out to conquer other nations, as France did in the days of Napoleon, or Greece did in the days of Alexander, or Rome did in the days of Caesar, and get away with it.

There is one thing that invariably stops such a nation, that is the combination that rises against it.

Combination is the one enemy that no warring nation can overcome.

It was combination that was sought in Woodrow Wilson's plan for a League of Nations. That league up to date has been so tied up with prejudices and passions and petty nationalisms that a combination has been impossible.

And now comes a voice of one crying in the wilderness, a voice from a nation almost everywhere discredited, snubbed and despised, a nation that is carrying on a vast and interesting experiment.

It is Russia. And Russia says to the assembled nations of the world what, after all, would be a very simple thing coming from any source. It is that the way to disarm is to disarm. The way to get rid of war is not to be ready for war.

It would seem that the commonsense of this proposal ought to appeal to everybody. On the contrary, it was almost universally met by amused smiles and tolerant shoulder shrugs. M. Litvinoff demanded an immediate debate on the Russian plan, which was to force immediate disarmament within four years. He said of the American proposal of Mr. Kellogg:

"The sincerity of that proposition could not be emphasized more persuasively than by adherence to the Soviet project for disarmament; not only with view to moral prohibition, but to destruction of the possibility of making war.

New York Day by Day

by O.O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, May 16—First impressions of Manhattan: Getting lost in the Pennsylvania station . . . The policeman who said: "This is Thoity Thoid st." . . . The thrill of a bus-top ride up Fifth ave. . . . The first sight of a hansom cab . . . The public library lions.

That hottest 4th of July in 50 years . . . The stuffy, windowless boarding house room on West 57th street . . . The Polish household drudge who spoke no English . . . The clerk at the newsstand in the Arcade somewhere near Columbus Circle who talked to me as though I had always lived in New York.

Ray Long's office in the Marbridge Building . . . Ethel M. Kelley's kindness to a newcomer . . . Ben Hampton looking at me and thundering: "We want only men on this magazine with ideas" . . . Playing bottle pool with Harris Merton Lyon in John McGraw's billiard hall on 34th st.

Irvin Cobb in the first flush of fame strolling through Peacock Alley wearing a fuzzy green hat . . The apartment on West 144th st. where H. T. Webster, R. M. Brinkerhoff, Ray Rohn and I resided . . . The day Lillian Russell called and smoked a tiny cigar . . .

The movie theater named for John Bunny, where we went Saturday night . . . The fear of the subway which has never been overcome . . . The loss of a job and the long quest for another . . . The eight weeks spent as a commission advertising solicitor without earning a penny . . . My dog, Junior . . . Lunch at the Lambs with Victor Herbert.

Day on the Evening Mail . . . And the encouragement of Burns Mantle . . . The friendliness of Grantland Rice . . . And the office wit, Rube Goldberg . . . The interview with Chauncey Depew printed on the first page . . . The codfish cakes and grape juice at Dewey's . . . Ham and—Dolan's . . . The song "Dearie."

Herb Roth's apartment in Gramercy Park . . . And his janitor, William, with the Weberfield dialect . . . H. L. Doherty's old home at Bridge and Broad . . . The rented morning suit for Frank Reilyl's wedding . . . Madam Laloy's red ink palace back of the Metropolitan . . . And the quarter in the slot electrical piano.

MORE couples apply daily at the Little Church Around the Corner to be married than any other place in Greater New York. It is the metropolitan Gretna Green and the sidewalk in front is always strewn with rice and the gutters dotted with old shoes. While there are many marriages there, there are many disappointed couples turned away. Every prospective bride and groom is questioned carefully by the good Dr. Ray. More than a marriage license is required. He must be convinced the couples are alive to the sacred responsibilities and not responding to an impulse or they must go elsewhere.

ROGER WOLF KAHN continues his jazz orchestra activities. At the writing he is taking a flier into vaudeville. Those who thought his quixotic venture was the passing whim of a millionaire's son have found that not the case. In the beginning he is said to have borrowed an amount from his father to launch his musical career. This he paid back in a thoroughly business-like way and he now has a comfortable bank balance acquired solely through his own efforts.

YOUNG KAHN'S gaudy night club was assumed to be a mere play-pretty for him to toy with. His father's social prominence presaged a brilliant patronage But it didn't click and the youth immediately put up the shutters.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

I HAVE been looking at Rockwell Kent's drawings. You should know his drawings and his books. They're the sort of art you need.

Rockwell Kent is a big, hard-working, sensible man. He writes books and draws pictures for a living, and because he likes to. The pictures I have been looking at are in his new book "Voyaging." He was very poor and he wanted to see South America so he shipped as a common sailor and went down in a small sailboat along the coasts of Tierra del Fuego to Cape Horn. He went just as you or I would have gone, spitting on his hands and observing from his eyes. Afterwards he put the story of it into a book.

When you look at those pictures you feel as if you could have drawn them. That is, if you knew how to hold a pen. They make things look as things look. And they make you want to look at things. They make you see pictures as he saw pictures. And they fill you full of strong, simple, interesting words and thoughts which you would like to write down if you had time. When Rockwell Kent draws a mountain he draws a mountain—he doesn't draw a lot of la-de-da lines. He draws a mountain you could climb or sit on—something that goes up tall and hard and beautiful into the sunshine and the storm. And when he draws a boat you feel that it is a boat. He puts a boat on the paper and he puts it into your life. You feel that he likes boats and doesn't mind getting sweaty and dirty for the joy of seeing the sea. And suddenly you also want to be on a boat seeing the sea—and you realize that here is something great and moving.

In short, you feel that these words and pictures are not just part of a book—they are part of life—they are part of YOUR life. They are a part of your life you have wanted to find. And now you have found them!

That is great art. That is the only thing that has a right to be called great art. Words or pictures or music that add something to your life—that put something back into your life which you have lost or overlooked—they are real art.

When I look at Rockwell Kent's drawings I feel good. I feel good about everything in life. I feel that if he can get all that kick out of furling a sail or building a fire I can get a kick out of making a beef stew or shortening my last Winter's suit. So I go home and do it, and it's great. I feel that I, too, am an artist. I am turning a common thing into an adventure.

Which, I repeat, is great art.

All the rest is hooey.

Part Tiger, Part Lion

TIGER FATHER

LIONESS MOTHER

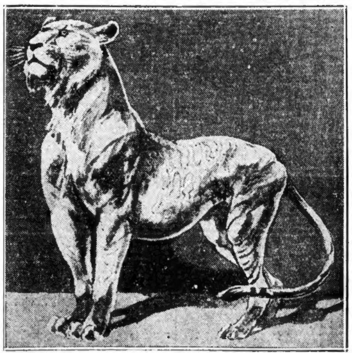
And nature setting a limit to such mongrel mixtures deprives the mule of offspring.

This tigon is said to have the bad qualities of both his parents and the good qualities of neither. He is a restless, furtive, suspicious beast.

The father and mother of the strange carniverous mongrel show a liking and some gratitude to the keeper that cares for them and feeds them. The tigon possesses neither affection, nor gratitude.

This tigon, like other mongrels, including the mule, will be the last of his race. Nature having mapped out the various tribes of animals, from clam to man, does not want her plan spoiled.



"TIGON," HALF TIGER, HALF LION

The mongrel for some reason is permitted once, but his race stops. No mongrels FROM mongrels.

The earth would be a strange chaos, if all animals could mix as the ass and the horse, the lion and the tiger, and some other animals. Imagine a "camelphant," half elephant, half camel, with a hump on its back and part of a trunk, or "rattlestrich," half rattlesnake, half ostrich, crawling along the ground, flapping its wings.

We take many things for granted, including the wisdom of nature that keeps separate all the species and sub-species of animals, from shivering marmoset to giant gorilla, from mouse to whale.
